Sen. Byrnes Offers Plan To Balance 1938 Budget

Program to Slash Huge Relief Grant

Proposes Horizontal Cut of 10% in Funds for Departments.

By Robert C. Albright.

A two-point plan for balancing the 1938 budget by sharing relief spending with the States and making a horizontal 10 per cent cut in regular departmental appropriations was disclosed last night by Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina.

Byrnes, influential member of the Senate Appropriations Committee and White House confidante, moved into the center of the Administration's economy drive in the first formal announcement of his dual plan to bring outlays into line with revenues.

His proposals, which have been discussed with the President, and have been the basis of informal leadership conferences, are:

Relief Amendment.

1. An amendment to the President's relief appropriation bill requiring States, municipalities and counties able to raise funds for their needy to put up 50 per cent of the cost of WPA projects. The 1938 relief appropriation would be cut from $1,500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000.

2. A flat 10 per cent cut in all appropriations, to be proposed in a joint resolution or supply bill amendment, after the War Department bill, last of the regular departmental appropriation measures, reaches the Senate. Fixed charges would be exempt from the slash, and the President would be given authority to transfer funds between departments to avoid hardships.

"I am confident," Senator Byrnes told The Post, "that if these two proposals are approved by Congress the budget can be balanced in the next fiscal year in accordance with the President's wishes."

Glass Indorses Plan.

One of the first to indorse publicly the Byrnes plan for holding relief appropriations to $1,000,000,000 was Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

"I am for the strictest economy, and I am for Senator Byrnes' $1,000,000,000 relief bill amendment," said Senator Glass. "I think that amount is too much."

Wide support was claimed by the South Carolinian in both House and Senate, even in the face of so-called "liberal" bloc drives to bolster relief appropriations to as much as $3,000,000,000.

Byrnes has been carrying the plan around "in his pocket" for several weeks, has talked it over with the President, and has been soliciting leadership support. Formal announcement of his proposed 10 per cent horizontal cut in appropriations was to have awaited passage of all regular departmental bills. It was feared a premature announcement might precipitate moves to increase appropriations beyond normal levels, in anticipation of a later slash.

G. O. P. Counter Move.

Meantime, a counter move had been made by House Republicans to cut each appropriation bill as it came before the House. A 10 per cent cut of the Agriculture appropriation bill had been attempted unsuccessfully by Republicans in the House Appropriations Committee. Yesterday Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the committee, arose in the House to urge that agricultural appropriations "be held at least to the level of last year"—$783,000,000, as opposed to the $927,000,000 proposed this year. This would entail a 15 per cent cut in the agricultural bill now before the House.

Byrnes' move for a cut in regular appropriations will await House passage of three remaining supply

CHIEF WALTER BULL MAN.

Six Braves Still Here, Maybe, Despite Rep. Case's Efforts; Nocturnal Prowling of Joshua Spotted Owl and Moses Slow Fly Worries Boarders.

By Scott Hart.

At all events, it is reasonable to suppose that Representative Francis Case (Republican), of South Dakota, went to bed last night and maybe the six Sioux Indians went to bed, also.

When Representative Case emerged from his private office at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon to find reporters and photographers in his reception room, he had the look of a man with a premonition of an impending jam. His face showed it plainly when someone asked him where the Indians were.

The Indians had been in Washington for three days to air complaints before the House Indian Affairs sub-committee and to wait upon, in full feathers, the officials of the Indian Bureau. A few hours before Case, a member of the subcommittee, emerged from his office, he had heard 79-year-old Bull Man of the Rosebud Reservation tell the committee that the effect of the Wheeler-Howard act has "been to make us eat more of our own horses . . . My people told me to bring my bow and arrow and shoot the act or the charter."

Case had seen their petition, signed by 1,600 Indians, a barbed arrow against the Wheeler-Howard act. He knew the Pine Ridge Agency residents had rejected a charter proposed under the act, and he had heard the Indians blame the act for causing "increased confusion and misunderstanding." Also, he had just learned from Commissioner of Indian Affairs Collier that America's Indians, once considered a vanishing race, now are increas-

Park-o-Meters For D. C. Urged To Aid Revenue

House Group Estimates $500,000 to $2,000,000 Would Be Raised.

By James D. Secrest.

Washington motorists, already threatened by an increase in gasoline tax and levies on their motor vehicles, yesterday were confronted with another taxation possibility.

Members of the House sub-committee engaged in studying new sources of District revenue expressed informal approval of the adoption of slot machines, such as park-o-meters, through which autoists would pay for parking privileges on downtown streets.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, where the park-o-meter system originated, declared:

"They're coming sure, and this city might as well get ready for them."

Estimates as to the amount of revenue they might produce ranged from $500,000 to $2,000,000 a year.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, after citing data gathered last year, stated that there is space for 7,365 parked autos in the three traffic zones of the city after all reserved areas are excluded.

He estimated that the District might expect a minimum of $500,000

Italy, Austria Renew Pledge Of Friendship

Duce, Schuschnigg Agree to Fight Vienna--Czech Front.

Venice, April 22 (AP).—Italy and Austria renewed pledges of friendship today in exchanges between Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg. The two appeared agreed after a three-hour conference in this city of canals to oppose emphatically any effort by France to bring Austria into an anti-German front with Czechoslovakia.

They were represented as determined to preserve the Rome-Berlin axis—fixed by accords between Austria and Germany, Italy and Germany, and Austria and Italy.

These triangular accords were designed to work toward friendly co-operation among the three participants and to guarantee the preservation of Austrian independence. Italian observers have held France hoped to swerve Austria from the Italo-German alliance to one with France and Czechoslovakia.

Schuschnigg was said to have presented two questions today to the Italian Duce:

Court Plan's Hearings Set To End Today

Proponents Not to Use Time for Rebuttal, Ashurst Says.

Executive Consideration by Committee to Begin Tuesday.

By Sidney Olson.

The hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on the President's court reform program adjourned last night on the promise they will be concluded today, more than six weeks after their opening.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst, the bland chairman of the committee, told reporters that the proponents of the court bill will not avail themselves of the opportunity to present rebuttal testimony the rest of this week and next, thus automatically closing the sessions.

The bill will go into the second phase of the long struggle—committee consideration in executive session—at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday. Recent developments in the committee members' sentiments point at the present time to the possibility that the bill will be brought to the floor in its original form, without amendment, as opposition members have expressed the desire to bring out the bill "in its worst possible form—an increase of six justices in the Supreme Court."

Many Avenues Open.

However, so many avenues of action are open to the committee, and so many complicating factors will enter into its consideration, such as the division of the group on the Gavagan anti-lynching bill, that observers are agreed that guesswork is of little value now.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, will move to separate the bill in two parts, to make the addition of justices to the Supreme Court stand alone as a single measure. Ashurst and the small group of out-and-out proponents will oppose this and the votes of the group who favor a two-justice compromise might be directed against it.

Sentiment in and out of the committee has grown for the two-justice compromise, coupled with a constitutional amendment of the Wheeler-O'Mahoney type, requiring two-thirds vote in a court to declare an act of Congress unconstitutional.

Many Senators who are reluctant to vote for an increase of six justices would gladly go along on such a compromise, they have indicated, and even opposition leaders have long conceded 75 "sure" votes for such a plan. However, from the President on down, no Administration leader has yet given any public indication of the slightest willingness to accept any compromise whatever.

Audience Sizable.

Yesterday, for the first time in many weeks, a fair-sized audience attended the committee session, and as many as five Senators (out of the committee of 18) were present at the same time.

The audience was composed almost entirely of feminine supporters of the Women's National Committee for Hands Off the Supreme Court, a group of nearly 100, with badges and ribbons emblazoned with the organization's name. They had gathered to hear Catherine Curtis, their representative and managing director of the Women's Investors of America, who also fought the public utilities bill of 1935, inveigh against the court measure.

Miss Curtis, a tall, impressive lady, bluntly called most New Deal legislation "un-American." Pressed by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, to name the measures she thought un-American, she said, "the NRA," and then stopped, searching her memory. A white-haired lady called impatiently from the back of the room, "the AAA," and Miss Curtis called back, "Thank you!"

Petitions Presented.

As Miss Curtis finished her statement, the matrons applauded loudly and two messengers appeared, trundling between them nine shoe boxes stuffed with petitions against the court bill, reputedly signed by 25,000 women. The boxes were draped with a large white silk kerchief, bordered in blue, with the Declaration of Independence printed in bright letters on it.

Miss Dorothy Frooks, a New York lawyer, who described herself as "a Democratic leader of Westchester County," then held forth against the President's program. Miss

MRS. FRANK M. DICK.

Mrs. F. M. Dick Leads Balloting In D. A. R. Race

Maryland Woman, 6 Others Chosen Vice Presidents of Society.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Mrs. Frank M. Dick, of Cambridge, Md., with a vote of 1,314, headed the list of seven new vice presidents general presented last night to the Forty-sixth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Next in number of votes received was Mrs. Elmer H. Whitaker, Pasadena, Calif., with 1,286. Other winners among the 11 candidates on yesterday's ballot were: Mrs. William Henry Belk, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. Charles E. Head, Seattle, Wash.; Miss Bonnie Farwell, Terre Haute, Ind.; Mrs. Maurice Clark Turner, Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. George Baxter Averill, Milwaukee, Wis.

The two candidates for the post of honorary vice president general yesterday will be voted on again today. According to returns announced by Mrs. Frank L. Nason, chairman of tellers, Mrs. William B. Burney, of Columbia, S. C., got 1,018 votes and Mrs. William Hyde Talbott, of Rockland, Md., 542. A candidate must have a two-thirds vote to win.

Charles Taft Speaks.

Speakers at last night's meeting discussed problems of youth from opposite points of view. Looking at youth objectively, Charles P. Taft, Cincinnati lawyer and son of the late William Howard Taft, pointed out to the D. A. R.'s the errror of "painting red networks of communism across every evening sky."

"The panaceas of the social gospel and production for use, for instance, and all the other tag-words of the intellectuals become a little silly when the brickbat crashes through factory windows, or the man on horseback appears on the avenue," Taft said.

"Young people hate war with a deep hatred, and they should," Taft continued. "They will never admit that it is inevitable. They demand that it be stamped out like disease. They cannot see why 'defense' means protection of foreign trade and foreign investments."

The speaker suggested that young men and women be given "responsibility, a chance, and time to develop a real love of country that endures 365 days in the year."

Urges Fight on Privilege.

Another accent on youth was placed by Edward Howard Griggs, lecturer and author of Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y., who implied that his audience should regard the theme of youth from a subjective point of view. "For intellectual youth is not determined by the arithmetic of years," he said. "In all of us with constant growth, youth may be eternal. The late Justice Holmes, at 90, was a gay adolescent compared with many a fossilized academician of 30."

Proceeding on this premise, Griggs termed his audience "the new pioneers," and urged them to help "to conquer the wilderness of social injustice and drain the swamp of unfair privilege in the modern world."

Two Convicts Flee Lorton In Wild Dash

Members of 'Blackface Gang' Make Break in Stolen Car.

Wife of Official Loses Chase; 40 Guards Begin Search.

Two convicted highwaymen, members of the "blackface gang," escaped from Lorton Reformatory late yesterday, racing past rifle towers and crashing through a heavy woven-wire barricade in an automobile stolen from the prison garage.

The automobile belonged to a guard. A few minutes before they made their successful break for freedom, they were making repairs on the machine. The garage foreman who had been standing guard over them left to answer a telephone, and the men leaped into the machine and speeded away.

The men are Martin J. Walsh, 36, and Walter Forbush, 22, both serving terms of four to six years for armed robbery.

They were pursued over more than 20 miles of back country roads in Fairfax County by the pretty black-haired wife of the deputy superintendent of the reformatory, Mrs. E. J. Welsh.

Mrs. Welsh, 27 years old, short, and weighing about 130 pounds, leaped unarmed into her husband's automobile when she saw the fleeing convicts speed by her quarters.

She raced after them at speed that at times, she said, reached as high as 80 miles an hour.

Convicts Escape Woman.

The men made their break over an old gravel road, the same road over which the last escape was effected at Lorton in 1934. They drove the machine squarely into the center post of the barricade, with such force that it was ripped from the ground.

They backed the car up and raced it once more at the barricade, placed across the road at the edge of the reformatory reservation after the last break. Several more posts went down.

By this time the wife of the deputy superintendent had reached her car and was off in pursuit.

The convict car raced over Ox road to the town of Fairfax, closely followed by the reformatory machine with Mrs. Welsh at the wheel.

At Fairfax the convict car turned off and sped down the Little River pike to Annandale. Mrs. Welsh rapidly lost ground at this point, she said.

Between Annandale and Alexandria she lost her quarry and turned back to the prison.

At the reformatory Mrs. Welsh, who was the only person connected with the institution to give the fleein prisoners a chase, returned to her quarters and refused, momentarily at least, to see reporters and photographers.

Peake Explains Escape.

Forbush and Walsh were members of a hold-up group known as the "blackface gang" because they smeared their faces with burnt cork when they were robbing liquor stores, restaurants and other places in the fall of 1935.

The break-up of the gang and the conviction of its members began after Policeman Earl Baker shot and killed the gang leader, Morris Beck, on October 13, 1935, who was holding up the Blue Bell Cafe at 2335 Bladensburg road northeast.

Lorton is one of the "model" penal institutions of the country. For many years it was maintained without walls. Construction of a wall has been started but not completed.

The story of the escape was told by Col. William E. Peake, the reformatory's veteran superintendent,

Police Fire Kills Trapped Fugitive In Jail Delivery

Uniontown, Pa., April 22 (AP).—An escaped prisoner, hiding in a mine house at Filbert, was shot to death today in a gun fight with police after he wounded one of the officers.

Police fired 40 to 50 shots and hurled tear gas through a window before the fugitive fell.

The prisoner was named as Hamilton Leftwich, colored, one of six who escaped last week from the Fayette County jail.

Strike Leaders, G. M. Agree on Canadian Truce

Day's Developments On the Labor Front

Spokesmen for General Motors and 3,700 Canadian strikers agreed on a settlement plan. The strikers will vote on the plan, terms of which were kept secret, at a mass meeting today.

The National Labor Relations Board stepped into the riot-scarred shoe strike controversy in Maine.

The executive committee of the American Federation of Labor, meeting here, deferred action on expulsion of Committee for Industrial Organization unions and called a meeting to map plans to combat the C. I. O. expansion program.

Troops Guard Shoe Workers After Rioting

Strikers' Demonstration Outside Maine Plant Is Prevented.

By the Associated Press.

Lewiston, Me., April 22.—Steel-helmeted National Guardsmen and police late today nipped an attempt by striking shoe workers to demonstrate in front of an Auburn factory filled with loyal workers, as the National Labor Relations Board stepped into the riot-scarred controversy.

These actions came after a day which saw the arrest of Powers Hapgood and five other C. I. O. leaders, along with two strikers, for contempt and "riotous assault." All were out on bail tonight.

In a sleet-pelted scene, guardsmen turned back near dusk the few strikers who managed to penetrate the lines thrown up by Lewiston police to prevent another march from Lewiston to Auburn. Nineteen factories in the two cities have been hit by the strike.

Chief Deputy Sheriff James Longley instructed his deputies to lock and guard the county court house in Auburn. He asserted he had received reports that strikers planned to storm the building.

Dr. A. Howard Myers, New England regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, meanwhile, asserted he had sufficient facts to "warrant the issuance of a complaint and require a formal investigation through a public hearing." He said he came here to investigate charges that manufacturers had interfered with the right of the workers to organize.

Guardsmen on Watch.

Dr. Myers conferred with strike leaders first, then went into conference with manufacturers, who have maintained since the strike began a month ago they would not deal with representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

A day of swift developments in the strike not only saw the arrest of Hapgood, Harvard graduate and secretary of the C. I. O. in New England, and his companions, but also found Hapgood and several other strike leaders held in contempt by Justice Harry Manser for violation of an injunction by continuing their strike activity.

The 300 guardsmen, shouldering bayonet-tipped rifles, were sent here by Gov. Lewis O. Barrows after police yesterday turned back with tear gas and night sticks approximately 1,000 demonstrators in a battle on a bridge over the Androscoggin River.

In Washington, John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., today accused Maine officials of taking sides with the manufacturers.

"After the recent decision of the Supreme Court on the Wagner Labor Relations act," he asserted, "we had a right to expect conduct by the Maine authorities more in keeping with that law."

Approximately 141 guardsmen were on active duty in the strike area, while the remainder were on call at the Lewiston armory. Maj. Lester Brown, in charge of the unit, said a chemical warfare detachment

Plan to Reopen Plant on Monday

Work to Be Resumed at Oshawa if Men Accept Pact.

By the Associated Press.

Toronto, Ontario, April 22.—An agreement to end the General Motors strike at Oshawa, now in its third week, was reached tonight in the office of Premier Mitchell Hepburn.

If the 3,700 strikers ratify its terms, agreed to by representatives of both the company and the workers, they will go back to work Monday morning.

C. H. Millard, local president of the United Automobile Workers of American union, took the agreement to Oshawa for presentation to the union stewards tonight and to a strikers' meeting at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

J. L. Cohen, union counsel, called the agreement "eminently satisfactory."

Although its terms were not made public, the agreement generally was believed to call for a wage increase, a cut in hours and other changes in working conditions.

Neither side represented in the four-hour conference in Premier Hepburn's office in which the agreement was reached gave any hint what form of recognition, if any, the terms gave the United Automobile Workers.

Recognition Chief Issue.

Union recognition was the principal issue in the strike.

The men walked out of the Oshawa plant after General Motors of Canada, Ltd., refused to recognize the union, an affiliate of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, as their collective bargaining agent.

Millard and Cohen appeared at today's peace conference as "representatives of the Oshawa workers." They also had to state they did not represent the C. I. O. and were not under instructions from the organization before Premier Hepburn received them.

Spokesmen present for the company were Harry J. Carmichael, vice president of the Canadian concern, and J. B. Highfield, Oshawa plant manager.

General Motors officials had insisted any settlement of the strike must come in Premier Hepburn's office.

In view of the strikers' unanimous vote Monday night, rejecting a company settlement proposal that included a wage increase and a cut in hours, no one connected with the strike ventured an opinion whether tomorrow's mass meeting would accept today's settlement proposal.

Premier Hepburn said in a statement he was "very happy" that the agreement had been reached. He refused to discuss the situation orally.

Two previous efforts by the premier to hold a peace conference failed because of the C. I. O. issue.

C. I. O. Is Repudiated.

His statement said:

"After lengthy and amicable negotiations carried on between the government, the General Motors officials and the committee representing the employes of General Motors, headed by their solicitor, Mr. J. L. Cohen, a complete agreement was arrived and, at this moment, only the approval of the employes is required.

"As soon as tomorrow's mass meeting places its stamp of approval on our actions of today the General Motors executive will announce that the plant at Oshawa will be reopened on Monday morning.

"I would ask the press to co-operate with the government at this crucial time and not publish anything of a provocative nature."

This was understood to refer to Hepburn's fight to prevent John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization from taking part in negotiations to settle the strike. Hepburn Lewis, No. 1 enemy in Canada, has branded C. I. O. agents "foreign agitators," and has declared that the Lewis organization will have no part in the organization of Canadian labor.

Small Boy Baffles Bobbies.

London, April 22 (AP).—Scotland Yard was baffled tonight by a small, snub-nosed boy of 16. He had London's 19,000 policemen nursing wounded pride and some of them rubbing bruised shins. He kicked and squirmed from his guard at Juvenile Court yesterday, climbed out of a window and took to the rooftops. Officers cast off helmets and gave chase. Crowds watched for hours as perspiring police pursued the boy but finally were outdistanced. Police watched the boy's home in Wembley tonight.

Soviet Official Disappears.

Moscow, April 22 (AP).—Suave, chivalrous Boris Steiger, Russian "man of many secrets," was believed today to have disappeared because he knew too much about delicate diplomatic negotiations. Windsor May Serve Britain.

St. Wolfgang, Austria, April 22 (AP).—A friend suggested tonight that the Duke of Windsor is preparing for colonial service in the British Empire.

The friend reasoned:

The duke is studying seriously British colonial policy and has purchased numerous new maps of Africa.

He is very popular among the colonies.

He gave up a kingdom, which proves he lacks personal ambitions, and thereby qualifies him for an "elder statesman" role.

He pledged service to his brother, King George VI, in his abdication broadcast last December.

There have been disturbing developments in Africa—the Union of South Africa government is campaigning against Nazism in the former German colony, Southwest Africa, now under British mandate.

Too Weak to Rise, Calls in Neighbors To Pray in Fast

Stooping Oak, Tenn., April 22 (AP).—Too weak to arise from bed today, Jackson Whitlow, 45, who said he quit eating 44 days ago "at a call from the Lord," summoned neighbors to his mountain cabin tonight to pray and sing for him.

The trapper denied any intention of breaking his fast until he hears "another call from the Lord."

Mrs. Whitlow said her husband was very weak and weighed only 103 pounds. He weighed 137 when he started the fast.

Basin Site for Shrine Assailed In House on Eve of Hearings

Designation of the Tidal Basin as the site for the proposed Thomas Jefferson Memorial was assailed anew in the House yesterday, on the eve of opening of hearings on a resolution to undo part of the memorial commission's work.

Quoting extensively from The Post, Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, urged the House to withhold the $500,000 appropriation requested by the commission if it does not reconsider its decision to build the monument at the Tidal Basin at the expense of the Japanese cherry trees.

Other highlights yesterday in the controversy were:

Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the commission which picked John Russell Pope as architect and decided that the memorial shall be erected in West Potomac Park at the Tidal Basin, criticized the D. A. R. in an open letter for opposing the choice of site.

Representative Otha D. Wearin (Democrat), of Iowa, said he expected a huge turnout before the House Library Committee this morning at the opening of hearings on his resolution directing the Boylan group to conduct a competition for the architectural award.

Thomas Ellis Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, applied to the House Appropriations Committee for permission to be heard in protest against the cherry blossom site. The committee is now drafting the second deficiency bill, in which a $500,000 item to begin construction of the memorial has been recommended.

Treadway, minority dean of the House and a member of the library committee, said he doesn't see why an area already attractive and satisfactory should be revamped for

A.F. of L. Drops Move to Expel C. I. O. Unions

Executives Call Meeting on May 18 to Fight Growth of 'Rebels.'

By William V. Nessly.

The American Federation of Labor, instead of calling a special convention to expel the "rebel" unions in John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, late yesterday summoned representatives of its 108 loyal unions to meet in Cincinnati, Ohio, on May 18 to map a fight against continued expansion of the C. I. O.

President William Green and members of the executive council of the federation, at the end of a three-day emergency meeting here, held that "it is not essential that a special convention be held," since the C. I. O. unions have shown "they no longer regard themselves associated in any way with the A. F. of L."

"Under such circumstances," the council said in a statement, "it would ill become the executive council to add dignity to a group and to a procedure that from its inception has been steeped in the cesspool of illegality and of irresponsibility."

Strike's End Hailed.

Other developments here in the tense labor-industrial situation included these:

President Homer Martin and the executive board of the United Automobile Workers received "with much pleasure" word of an agreement to end the strike in General Motors plants at Oshawa, Ontario, Canada.

Hugh Thompson, C. I. O. organizer who had directed the strike, said he would return to Oshawa at once, after a one-day trip here to report to Martin and the board. Martin also was expected to return to Oshawa, after being banned from the peace talks by Ontario Premier Hepburn.

Frank J. Dillon, sent by Green to Atlanta, Ga., to take over control of the Georgia Federation of Labor after State President A. Steve Nance had joined the C. I. O., reported that he had organized a separate convention of the Georgia Federation. Nance planned to ask a Senate investigation of "coercion of delegates."

John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., accused Maine officials of taking sides with shoe manufacturers in the Lewiston strike disorders.

The A. F. of L. statement was filled with biting phrases hurled at the C. I. O. It pointed out that the Tampa convention of the federation had directed the council to continue efforts to bring peace in labor's ranks, but authorized it to call a special convention whenever "more drastic" action was held advisable.

Suspension to Remain.

"Forces of destruction," "constant violation of every obligation entered into with affiliated * * * unions," "interference with collective agreements entered into with employers by affiliated unions," and "arbitrary dictation of one or more individuals bent upon the destruction of the A. F. of L.," were among the charges placed against the Lewis forces.

Green said the C. I. O. unions would remain suspended until that organization is dissolved or they return to the A. F. of L.

The Cincinnati conference, he said, "will consider plans that may be recommended by the council for strengthening the A. F. of L., make plans to carry on an organizing campaign universally, and to provide ample funds for the campaign."

The federation intends to organize into Federal unions all workers who want to join, he said. Textile workers have asked affiliation with the A. F. of L., he declared, despite the intensive C. I. O. drive in the textile industry now under way. A request for affiliation has been received from the Progressive Miners, bitter opponent of Lewis' United Mine Workers, and Green said he had been authorized to study the request.

Federal Unions Not Called.

Only national and international unions will attend the Cincinnati meeting, the hundreds of Federal unions in the A. F. of L. not being called.

Green said that 85 per cent of the delegates at the Georgia Federation convention followed Dillon into the separate meeting after Nance had refused to refrain from presiding. Green said Nance and his delegates could have been "ejected," but the Dillon forces "did what was necessary in the most orderly and decent manner."

From Atlanta last night came a United Press dispatch that Nance had drafted a resolution calling on the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee of the Senate to investigate alleged "coercion of delegates" by the Dillon forces.

New Faces in Congress.

REPRESENTATIVE HERMAN P. EBERHARTER.

Native of Pittsburgh Made Such a Showing in Primaries He Won Democratic Support in Election; Is Supporter of Court Plans.

By Liam Lenihan.

To Pittsburgh's "Golden Triangle," Herman P. Eberharter looked just as good riding the Democratic donkey as tramping, lone wolf-like, under independent colors.

The freshman Congressman from the Smoky City's shopping and banking district ran as an independent in the primaries against a field of 35, won, and gained the regular organization backing for the finals.

Eberharter was 33 when he was graduated from the Duquesne University Law School. War and the business of living had interrupted his studies. But they failed to swerve him from an early childhood dream of mastering dusty legal tomes and of hanging out a shingle.

Experience as clerk, stenographer, traveling salesman, soldier and small business man helped him form a definite social philosophy, he feels. It taught him too that our present economic system is "outworn and outmoded" and that shorter working hours are the only cure-all for unemployment.

He will back the President's court reorganization plan because he believes it would be "lasting and permanent" and he feels it is less "radical" than the counter-proposal of adding two justices and passing a two-thirds amendment.

"When we can't give men employment who reach the age of 45, it's not wrong to ask men to retire when 75," he commented.

And concerning the Wagner Act he had this much to say: "It will solve most of labor's troubles. The right to bargain collectively has now been constitutionally established. That also gives labor a responsibility to live up to."

Thumbnail sketch: He was born in Pittsburgh, April 29, 1892; left school to earn a living; enlisted and, after demobilization, invested in a small confectionery business; went to night school and finally was graduated. From 1925 on he was engaged in the general practice of law in his home city. In 1932 he contested the primaries as an independent and was defeated. Three years later he was elected to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. He is married, wears glasses; is stockily built, inclined to baldness.

End Promised To Court Plan Sessions Today

Frooks, red-haired and earnest, and dressed in a forest-green suit, trimmed in green squirrel, assaulted the Administration in no uncertain terms, saying of the President:

"He continues to preface recovery with reform, to annihilate critics and opponents, and to keep himself surrounded with yes-men and theoretical advisers. By subterfuge he has continued the NRA in defiance of the Supreme Court. He still issues fiats and plans to spend money so that through a demoralization of trade and industry and a continued dole system a dictatorship will become an enforced necessity."

Dean L. J. Tepoel, of Creighton Law School, Omaha, Nebr., who appeared at the morning hearing, discussed the possibility that the change in the court, if enacted, might cause the judiciary "to lose its authority and self-respect and thereby to become the mere tool of the two political branches of the Government."

Arizona Asks Earth's Biggest Water Project

Rivers and Harbors Group to Get $350,000,000 Irrigation Plea.

The thirty-second annual National Rivers and Harbors Congress, opening here today, was confronted already with the demand of Arizona, youngest State in the Union, that the delegates indorse a giant irrigation project, an all-gravity canal and tunnel system which would furnish most of that State with water.

In a statement issued here last night, Fred T. Colter, the State's representative at the congress recalled Arizona's 15-year battle against the seven-State compact which resulted in construction of Boulder Dam and called for approval of the $350,000,000 Glen-Bridge-Verde "highline project."

If the project, presented to the rivers and harbors gathering for the first time this week, is constructed, it will be the world's biggest irrigation project, Colter said, reclaiming 6,000,000 acres of potentially fertile farm land and producing incidentally 5,000,000 electric horsepower.

He also said the project would be national rather than local in scope, in its bearing on national welfare, and international to the extent it would preserve Colorado River waters for the United States which otherwise would go to Mexico for irrigation.

The rivers congress faces a long, variegated list of questions and speakers. It begins today with the meeting of the projects committee headed by Representative William J. Driver (Democrat), of Arkansas.

This committee will consider a long list of projects from all over the country, among them the Arizona project. The convention proper opens Monday.

D. C. Man Injured In British Guiana

Georgetown, British Guiana, April 22 (AP).—Gilbert Bergeson, 26, vice president of the Fabex Co., of Washington, was brought down from the Puruni gold fields today, injured seriously by a falling tree in a jungle camp.

He had been brought 200 miles by canoe, truck and rail since Monday night by his parner, Eugene Ferson, president of the company, which is seeking gold here.

Bergeson was believed recovering, despite severe head wounds.

Taxes Proposed On Crowds Going To See Coronation

The rush for passports is so great that the State Department wants extra help to handle it, and some legislators are talking about reaping a tax harvest at the travelers' expense.

Miss Ruth B. Shipley, chief of the passports division, appealed to Congress for funds to hire additional clerks. She said applicants were standing in line daily at passport offices in New York and other large cities.

The British coronation and American prosperity, Miss Shipley predicted, would raise passport totals this year to 170,000, an increase of 30,000 over last year.

Representative Fish (Republican), New York, proposed a 100 per cent tax on all Americans attending the coronation ceremonies.

"I would add to that," he said, "a 100 per cent tax on all American heiresses marrying European fortune hunters."

Miners' Union Is Disorganized By Kidnaping

Superintendent Gave Harlan Sheriff Full Control, Committee Hears.

A local union of the United Mine Workers of America, situated at Closplint, Ky., in the heart of "bloody Harlan" County, "folded up" the day after a colored union member had been kidnaped and beaten by Harlan deputy sheriffs in the employ of the Coal Operators Association, the Senate Civil Liberties Committee was told yesterday.

A. R. Matthews, self-confident young mine superintendent at Closplint, a partly owned company town located chiefly on the property of the Clover Splint coal mine, admitted the union had "folded" after the kidnaping, which had been described at length by union men on the stand.

Gave Sheriff Free Hand.

Matthews endeavored to answer testimony that armed deputies had patrolled the streets the next day, forcing citizens off the streets and allowing no miners to get food or water from the company-owned commissary, by saying:

"I turned the whole situation over to Sheriff Middleton of Harlan County. I had confidence in his judgment. I wanted the deputies there to preserve peace and order."

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, asked sharply:

"Was there any disorder?"

"No," Matthews said, smiling.

Photograph Shown.

Theodore Middleton, the sheriff, was brought into the testimony earlier, when La Follette placed in the record a photograph from the Louisville Courier-Journal of December 15, 1935, showing the inauguration of A. B. "Happy" Chandler on December 10 as Governor of Kentucky, in which Sheriff Middleton appears as one of the inaugural party in the form of a personal escort.

Chandler, although indorsed by the Mine Workers, has consistently failed to give miners protection for their civil liberties, J. J. Timko, union official, charged at the hearing.

Henry M. Lewis, a former deputy sheriff, told of the "kick-back racket," which he alleged was a part of the business of the sheriff's office.

Jordan Is Unlike Victim's Description of Slayer, Police Record Shows.

The finding of an old police "incidental" in the store room of the Second Precinct Station by Attorney John M. Holzworth, associate defense counsel for Thomas Jordan, condemned to die May 14 for the hold-up-murder of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, prompted the Justice Department yesterday to reopen its investigation of the case.

The old police report, an extract from Volume 16 of the record book of the Eighth Precinct and now on file with the Second Precinct, shows that Mrs. Jaynes' own description of the gunman who shot her does not tally in any way with the description of Jordan, as furnished by the Identification Bureau of the District Jail.

Six-Footer Sought.

Mrs. Jaynes, shot in the side during a holdup of the Garden T-Shoppe, 1835 Columbia road, the night of April 3, 1931, gave police a description of the two white men, one of whom fired at her before she realized she had been wounded. Two hours later she collapsed in her apartment and died at Garfield Hospital, April 5.

According to the "incidental," the man supposed to have done the shooting was "about 6 feet tall," and had "gray eyes and fair hair." Jordan, as described by the Indentification Bureau, is 5 feet 6¼ inches tall, has black hair and brown eyes.

Charges Police Rebuffs.

In addition to that memorandum, which was carried over the signatures of Policeman T. F. Heide, now retired, and F. J. Haack, a teletyped copy of the incidental is also on file at police headquarters showing that the lookout broadcast for the gunman and his accomplice described both men as being "about 6 feet tall."

Holzworth, at a press conference yesterday, said Maj. Ernest W. Brown had "denied him information," explaining that as far as the Police Department was concerned the case was closed.

In addition, Holzworth stated that both officers who made the midnight report as carried on the incidental refused to sign affidavits substantiating their record book statements.

District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, according to Holzworth, also echoed Maj. Brown's verdict with the words: "The case is closed."

At police headquarters, Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson at first refused to answer questions of reporters. Later he said, "If something new turns up, we will be willing to reopen the case."

Department of Justice officials were noncommittal. However, it was understood that the police report was only one of several new developments. These, it was learned, included:

Statements made by some members of the jury which convicted Jordan of first-degree murder in March, 1936, urging commutation of the death sentence to one of life imprisonment and setting forth their belief "that honest" justice will be done by such action.

An appeal by Holzworth to President Roosevelt to exercise his executive clemency, in which reference was made to the descriptions of the gunmen as given in the incidental.

A similar plea made by the condemned man's former employer, George L. Goodacre, chain restaurant proprietor.

A psychiatric examination of Jordan, arranged by Chief Defense Attorney Harry T. Whalen in an effort to prove his confession, which he later repudiated, was made while suffering from a severe attack of a nervous disorder.

Writes to Roosevelt.

Holzworth, who at one time was prosecuting attorney for Westchester County while President Roosevelt was Governor of New York, wrote the Chief Executive again after executive clemency was denied. The letter again reviewed the discrepancies in the case and pointed out Jordan was but one of several persons arrested as suspects in the case. "It also seems significant," Holzworth wrote, "that the Court of Appeals, in its opinion, implied rather strongly that the verdict against Jordan should not have been first-degree murder."

Hoover Urges Publishers Aid Drive on Crime

G-Men's Chief Wants Public Informed as on Health.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, advised the Nation's publishers tonight to apply the same principles to the crime problem they have to the health problem, and supply readers with informative articles on its nature, extent, prevention and cure.

Addressing the annual dinner of the advertising bureau of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, he said:

"If I were a publisher I would apply the same principles to crime that newspapers have applied to medicine. Certainly the average American newspaper subscriber is better equipped to evaluate his health because of the campaigns of education which have been carried on by the skilled men of science and medicine in the columns of their newspapers."

Southern Newsprint Backed.

Earlier the weight of the publishers' association was thrown behind the movement for establishment of a new industry in the South—the manufacture of newsprint paper.

The association unanimously adopted a resolution "to follow all proper pursuits in interesting financial backing in Southern newspaper projects," after deploring an announced price increase for newsprint which the organization said "would come close to wrecking a number of newspapers over the country."

James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville (Tennessee) Banner, told the publishers here for their golden jubilee convention that it is time to bring the newsprint industry to the United States where it would not be "harried by political and other conditions in Canada."

Regulation Opposed.

The members also heard Elisha Hanson, general counsel for the A. N. P. A., caution them that Government regulation "not only implies, but when exercised, means, control."

under whose administration this has been the first break.

Peak said the men were working in the garage under the supervision of William E. Sullender, civilian shop foreman who was unarmed. They were adjusting the machine's brakes.

Sullender was called to the telephone and Forbush and Walsh jumped into the automobile which belonged to Lewis F. Howden, a guard, and raced for the guard line across about 400 feet of the prison yard and between two towers each containing armed guards.

Only guards in the towers are equipped with firearms, Peak said, and no shots were fired at the speeding car because the guards in one tower believed the machine was driven by Howden, while guards in the other tower complained the auto was too far away for effective shooting.

Within 20 minutes of the break police radios and teletypes in Washington and Virginia cities were flashing descriptions of the men.

Walsh was described as weighing 190 pounds, having a ruddy complexion and brownish-gray hair. Forbush weighs 128 pounds, is 5 feet 7½ inches tall with blond hair and light gray eyes.

Forty armed guards from the reformatory were sent out for the search. They had with them Capt. Paul Peglow and Lorton's famed bloodhounds.

Police in Fairfax and Arlington counties, the force at Alexandria, where the convict trail ended, and officers of the Virginia State Highway Patrol also were taking part in the manhunt.

It was believed the escaped men were unarmed.

Capt. Peglow and the hounds were sent first to Falls Church on a tip the convicts had been seen there, but a short time later were sent to Alexandria. Officers hoped to sight the convict car and to begin the hunt for the men with the bloodhounds from the point of its abandonment.

Alexandria police, it was learned, were informed that the convict car had been seen there and it was believed the men had driven South in the hope of losing their pursuers in the vast wasteland of marshes and hills below the city.

Guards were placed at all bridges into the Capitol and at points south.

Both Forbush and Walsh were sentenced to Lorton in December, 1935, for four to six year terms on conviction of armed robbery.

Previously, police records show, Forbush had served several sentences for larceny. He was sentenced to Lorton, according to records at police headquarters, on five robbery counts.

Walsh was sentenced to serve one to two years in Lorton for automobile theft in 1935 and received a conditional release in March, 1935, according to the records. His record includes arrest for armed robbery a short time later when he was sent back to Lorton for his present term.

ir more rapidly than any other group in the country.

Informally, he had heard the Indians complain of Washington. "Too many people for such a small town," said Joshua Spotted Owl, and "Long ways from here to Dakota," said Moses Slow Fly, like a complaining Wind. Edward Stover, reservation-born interpreter, complained of having to walk on sidewalks. And then, around 4 p. m., Representative Case decided the time had come for the Indians to go home.

From his office window he could see the sporty-looking automobile in which Moses Slow Fly had brought the party to Washington. "I wonder where they can be?" said the Representative. On suggestion, reporters went to a rooming house across the street to look for the Indians and the lady of the house said she was wondering, too. She seemed distinctly dissatisfied.

She said she had no objection to Indians, as such, but it was a little peculiar how the Indians came to be dwelling with her. The Representative, she said, told her he was going to sned over six men, to have quarters for three days. Well, she said, she looked up a few hours later in the faces of Chief Joshua Spotted Owl, Chief Eugene Little, Joe Thin Elk, Bull Man, Moses Slow Fly, Ben American Horse and Edward Stover. She said she was afraid they would make a noise around the house and disturb the elderly English gentleman who has a room, and the young writer, who has been there about ten days.

"And I won't say the Indians were anything other than gentlemen in the house, but * * *." She told how they would go quietly enough to their rooms about 8 p. m., but thereafter would begin a trek to the bathtub which would continue until about 2 a. m.. Then, at about 5 a. m., the Indians would begin getting up. She said she would call Representative Case, immediately, and inform him that the rooms were no longer available.

A few minutes later the Indians were seen piling from two taxicabs in front of her dwelling house. They went in, attired themselves in native costume and came to the Representatives' office to notify him they intended remaining in Washington a while longer. They then posed for photographers and Spotted Owl told reporters he intended "living and dying by the Constitution." Edward Stover told reporters "nothing in Washington impressed him very much." Then the Representative began talking in earnest about the various schedules of departure.

Early last night The Post called the dwelling house to find out whether the Indians had gone. The lady said: "I will let you speak to someone else."

The voice that next came through the phone was that of Representative Case. "Wait a moment," he said, "I'll let you speak with someone else."

And then the voice that came through the phone was that of Edward Stover. It said:

"I don't know; I gues we'll stay somewhere."

Albemarle Board Approves Budget

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 22.—A county budget calling for proposed expenditures totaling $319,293 for the fiscal year beginning July 1 and ending June 30, 1938, was unanimously approved yesterday by the board of supervisors of Albemarle.

Addition of the Virginia Public Assistance Fund, totaling $14,839 and a slight increase in debt charges necessitated by the erection of three new public schools was listed as the reason for the estimated increase in expenditures.

Proposed expenditures for the general fund amount to $96,314, as compared to last year's estimate of $97,929.

PWA Aid Slash To Affect Virginia

Richmond, Va., April 22 (AP).—Sheridan P. Gorman, Virginia director for the Public Works Administration, said today that the proposed slash in Federal pump-priming expenditures would "materially affect PWA work in the State."

"General economic conditions throughout the State have improved greatly," Gorman said, "and the need for the type of stimulation created through construction of non-Federal work projects has diminished.

Gorman said that 104 projects, involving $16,505,219, have been approved by the State office of the PWA or are under examination. These projects, he said, "call for loan applications of $1,802,500 and grants of $7,408,672, on which application has been made to the PWA for grants of 45 per cent of the project cost."

Cleaver - Killer Hunted in N.Y. Waitress' Death

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—A killer, who wielded a cleaver-like weapon with vicious force, was sought by police tonight in connection with the fatal slashing of pretty Irene Wadas, 30-year-old waitress.

Miss Wadas, latest victim of a series of passion crimes, was attacked as she was about to leave the Columbia Residence Club on the Upper West Side for work this morning.

Her body, bearing marks of a violent struggle, was found in the darkened vestibule of the club, where she had occupied a one-room apartment with Thomas Hickey, a distributor of pin-ball games.

Deputy Inspector Richard F. Oliver said medical examiners found two deep gashes from a "rough-edged knife, probably a cleaver," on the woman's body.

One was a bone-deep slash across the thigh and the other was a 3-inch cut across the back of the neck, either one of which would have caused death within a few minutes.

In addition, the woman's hands were severely lacerated, indicating she had attempted to wrest the weapon away from her assailant.

Police began a search for a man identified by Lieut. Edward Kiley as Louis Karas, 30, a counterman, who formerly worked with Miss Wadas in an Eighth avenue cafeteria, for questioning.

James Sanios, proprietor of the cafeteria, told Inspector Oliver he had discharged Karas because he annoyed the woman. About two months ago he was compelled to let her go, too, he said, because Karas continued to frequent the place.

Electing and installing officers, awarding prizes and paying tribute to the memories of George Washington and the unknown dead of the Revolution, the C. A. R. yesterday adjourned its forty-second annual convention.

The final ceremonies were at Mount Vernon, beneath the C. A. R. tree, where Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York, was inducted into office as national president. She succeeds Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair.

Other newly elected officers are Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, national registrar; Mrs. Graham Lawrence, national chaplain, and Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, Mrs. John Francis Weinmann, Mrs. Edmund Burke Ball and Miss Myra Hazard, national vice presidents.

Those re-elected to the national panel were Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, national vice president presiding; Mrs. Frederick Allen Hunnewell, national recording secretary; Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national organizing secretary; Mrs. Percy M. Bailey, national corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, jr, national historian; Mrs. Charles S. Groves, national librarian curator, and Mrs. Lawrence H. Quirollo, Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mrs. John A. Maxwell, jr., Miss Aimee E. Powell, Miss Marie L. Beyerle and Mrs. Roy N. Lambert, national vice presidents.

Mrs. Sinclair was named honorary national president, and Mrs. Rose Mulcare, retiring national vice president, honorary national vice president.

Mary Elizabeth Wetzel, 15, of Oklahoma, was selected as winner of first prize for her play based on the Constitution. The award, offered by the District of Columbia State board, is in honor of Mrs. James Henry Harper, State director.

The Blanche Hill Ray Prize, offered by Mrs. Herbert Allen Black, former State director of Colorado, went to the Thomas Jackson Society of Maryland for having obtained the greatest number of subscriptions to the C. A. R. magazine. Second prize went to David Pendleton Society of Texas.

Bowl, Pitcher Presented.

Also at the morning session, before the delegates left on their annual pilgrimage to Washington's Tomb and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the American Revolution in Alexandria, the Staffordshire slip ware bowl and pitcher, which will augment the furnishings at Wakefield, were presented. They were contributed by Mrs. Thomas Randolph Keith, of Fairfax, Va.

The society also received a set of toy antique Limoges cups and saucers, an antique doll cabinet and 72 historical volumes, the gifts of Mrs. Howard.

Mrs. Howard, who is 84, was unable to make the journey to Mount Vernon. She did, however, accompany the group to Christ Church in Alexandria, where a silver baptismal ewer was presented in her honor.

Rail Unions Deny Secret Concessions

San Francisco, April 22 (AP).—Counsel for two old and powerful rail brotherhoods exclaimed "preposterous" today to charges that they accepted special privileges from the Southern Pacific Railroad and have become, in effect, "company unions."

The charges were laid before President Roosevelt's Emergency Mediation Board, seeking to avert a strike approved by 8,500 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. The walkout was postponed to permit hearings by the board.

Donald Richberg, former counsel for NRA, accused the Southern Pacific of "fostering a type of company unionism" by entering into secret agreements with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Order of Railway Conductors, which opposed the strike.

C. E. Weisell, representing the latter two groups, denied the agreements were secret or that they in any way deprived the junior brotherhoods of the right to collective bargaining.

D.A.R. Votes Tablet For Mrs. Magna

The forty-sixth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution yesterday voted that a tablet be placed in Constitution Hall in honor of Mrs. Russell William Magna, of Holyoke, Mass., honorary president general.

Stating in part that it was through Mrs. Magna's efforts "the funds for building Constitution Hall were, to a great extent, raised and under whose administration provisions were made for cancellation of the debt on the hall," the resolution stipulated that the tablet was to be placed in the same corridor as the one recently dedicated to Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook. Mrs. Cook was president general at the time Constitution Hall was built.

Continuance of Civilian Conservation Corps Asked Among Resolutions.

Several important resolutions were adopted yesterday morning at the business session of the forty-sixth Continental Congress.

The inter-American Peace Conference, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, alien representation in Congress, the Civilian Conservation Corps and the campaign for the control of cancer were some of the subjects on which attention was centered along with others more frequently associated with the work of the patriotic society.

The assembly went on record as commending:

The efforts of the President and of the Secretary of State in behalf of the establishment of amicable relations and the preservation of peace among the republics of the Western Hemisphere.

The work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. (This commendation carried with it a petition to Congress for "appropriations adequate to the development of the FBI program.")

The continuance of the Civilian Conservation Corps as a permanent agency under the discipline of the U. S. Army and under the direction of able supervisors, technicians and educators.

The proposed educational program of the National Society for the Control of Cancer.

An indorsement of the proposed amendment to Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution to "exclude aliens in counting the whole numbers of persons in each State for apportionment of representation in Congress" also went on record at the meeting.

Reaffirming the society's stand on immigration and deportation, the congress further indorsed the principles of reduction in established quotas of aliens, extension of the system of quotas to countries of the Western Hemisphere, deportation of illegal entrants and alien criminals, and provision for the registration of all aliens coming to the United States, even as visitors.

200 D. C. Tailors End Strike Today With Compromise

More than 200 tailors will return to work today on the basis of a compromise agreement reached yesterday to call off their two-day strike.

Spokesmen for the union described the agreement as embracing recognition of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, minimum wages of $33 a week for experienced tailors and $20 a week for helpers, with a maximum of 44 hours a week.

The strikers had demanded a 40-hour week and minimum wages of $36 and $22 in addition to recognition of the union.

The agreement was approved by the strikers at the end of a stormy 4-hour meeting at 808 I street northwest of Charlotte, N. C., whose appointment to the Supreme Court six years ago failed to be confirmed by the Senate, told the D. A. R.'s that "democracy is in a graver danger than it has been at any time since the fall of Napoleon. Let us not deceive ourselves into thinking that we have arrived in this country at a point where we can afford to dispense with constitutional safeguards," he continued. "Upon the preservation of the Constitution depends not alone the future of the republic, but the future of the liberties of mankind."

Following Judge Parker's address, Mrs. Earl Vinton Sisson, D. A. R. national defense chairman, urged members of the society to work toward having the Communist Party "declared by law an illegal party with no right to protection under our constitutional form of Government."

Scoring "so-called peace groups" who support "repeal of the oriental exclusion act, elimination of the use of armed force in industrial disputes, repeal of teachers' oath laws and discretionary immigration powers," Mrs. Sisson outlined the D. A. R. peace program in detail. She also voiced a strong plea for strengthening the R. O. T. O., stressing that it is an effective national defense agent.

Mrs. Sisson's reference to the D. A. R. stand on the Supreme Court question as being consistent "with the study of the American form of Government" brought applause from the audience. Regarding the proposed change in the judiciary, she said: "An amendment to the Constitution will pass the Congress and be ratified by three-fourths of the State legislatures if the people really want the changes."

Values of the R. O. T. O., touched on in Mrs. Sisson's address, were emphasized and elaborated by another speaker yesterday. Sveinbjorn Johnson, professor of law and legal counsel, University of Illinois, in his talk on "Military Training as a Factor in Education," pointed out that "in no department of education is social discipline imparted as it is in military courses." Character building, development of leadership and respect for the flag were other values Johnson mentioned in this connection.

The spotlight shifted again to the younger generation when a white-clad page, Miss Ruth Rose Richardson, of the Oregon State College, took the center of the stage to discuss "Youth's Viewpoint" on the modern world.

Denying that youth today are "the erractic extremists the press shows them to be, advocating every kind of movement that shocks the world" she declared that the average young man and woman "wish to follow the middle road, the democratic road, the American road."

Much of what ails youth today is the training to which it has been subjected, she said. "Schools should stress that a successful life need not include fame and riches," she went on. "Training people for happiness in their environment and condition is necessary in fostering real success. I do not mean to suppress ambition in the line of bettering one's position, but I am criticizing the policy of encouraging young people to follow fields above their abilities.

"Telling every child he can become a multi-millionaire or President is wrong. Here in America everyone is born equal in the rights of liberty and society; but there is no equality in minds and capabilities. Education should be training us to find our abilities and then to develop these facilities in forwarding ourselves."

Jefferson Kin Takes 2 Stands On Shrine Site

Randolph, on Boylan Body, Opposed, Then Favored Basin Location.

By Gerald G. Gross

Chairman John J. Boylan, in defending the program of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, repeatedly has stressed the fact that two of its members are descendants of the statesman to be honored. They are Hollins S. Randolph and Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, both appointed by President Roosevelt.

At a meeting of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission several weeks ago, Randolph described the memorial group's plans and supported its selection of the Tidal Basin, with its necklace of Japanese cherry trees, as the site.

Yet at the meeting of the Boylan commission June 5, 1935, when the chairman called on members to present statements as to their site preference, Randolph said:

"I certainly would not subscribe to disturbing those trees. I think it would be a very unholy hand that would lay itself upon those particular trees in the form they have been produced as an objective for international amity to represent and typify as they do, I might say, the extremes of good feeling between two great peoples."

Quoted From Proceedings.

Randolph, who is being quoted from the official proceedings of the meeting, hitherto kept secret by the commission, presented his statement immediately after Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, whose argument against interference with the Tidal Basin display was published in The Post yesterday.

Declaring his partiality to the Tidal Basin site, Randolph told his colleagues:

"If it be possible to put this memorial at that site without disturbing the trees and if it can be done without doing a bit less than adding to its beauty now, I believe that is the favored place for that reason.

"But I want to qualify that. If you disturb those trees it will interrupt the serenity and beauy of the spot as already worked out by Mr. Moore (Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission) and his associates and those who preceded them. It is only my own opinion."

Lonergan Preferred Anacostia.

Senator Augustine Lonergan, of Connecticut, who followed Randolph, stated that his first preference was Anacostia, assuming that East Capitol street is properly developed in the next few years; second, the north end of Sixteenth street, and, third, the south side of the Mall approximately opposite the Archives Building.

"I think what we are about to do is to build for the centuries," he said. "My own judgment is it would be a mistake to crowd these memorials in a small space."

Boylan then called upon Dr. Fiske Kimball, of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art and an appointee of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, Inc. He argued the merits of the Tidal Basin area.

Personal opinions of the other commission members as to the cherry blossom problem and the site question in general will be revealed tomorrow.

2 PWA Workers Hurt.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 22.—Two men suffered serious burns yesterday while sealing joints on the PWA construction of an 18-inch sewer line for the Waynesboro borough, when a bucket of boiling tar was accidentally spilled. The injured are Charles Ingles and Albert Kendall, both of Waynesboro.

Industrial Output Gain In February Shown In Survey

New York, April 22 (AP).—Industrial production expanded in most major countries in February, said the Monthly Review of World Economic Conditions issued by the National Industrial Conference Board today.

Gains in output were reported for the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Australia, the Netherlands and Japan. Leading Central and South American countries also experienced increases, according to the survey.

The advances were described as more than sufficient to offset declines in Canada and some of the smaller nations. Activity in Great Britain returned to the high December level, the summary declared.

Ethiopia Unconquered, Coptic Bishop Asserts

Danville, Va., April 22.—The student corps of Stratford College was told today by a prelate of the Coptic church that Italy will never succeed in subjugating Ethiopia but that its people "deceived by the League of Nations and taken unawares" will rise and throw off the yoke.

The speaker was Bishop C. F. Cheelzzli of the Progressive Coptic Church of America, himself an Ethiopian, Oxford University graduate and the holder of many literary degrees.

Munitions Trade Assailed By Bonnet

New York, April 22 (AP).—Georges Bonnett, French Ambassador to the United States, said in an address tonight that democracies "owe it to themselves" to solve the problem of unemployment without resorting to armament manufacture.

"There is not a man of good faith who does not know that the armament race will lead the world perhaps to war, certainly to ruin * * *," he told the Foreign Policy Association.

"We can and we must find for the workmen employment in other industries than those preparing devastation, ruin and death."

Czechoslovakia Demand Slows Up Sugar Parley

London, April 22 (AP).—Czechoslovakia's demand for a larger share of the world sugar market slowed up the International Sugar Conference today.

Czechoslovakian delegates, a reliable informant said, declared it would be difficult for them to compromise on their position.

Island Sold for Million.

Santa Barbara, Calif., April 22 (AP). Edwin L. Stanton, operator of a Los Angeles axle works, bought an island for a reported $1,000,000 today. He purchased 54,750 of Santa Cruz Island's 62,250 acres and said he will maintain the property as an old-style California ranch.

Tidal Basin Site For Memorial Again Assailed

something whose appearance may be questionable.

"Visitors to this city are more interested in the cherry blossoms than they are in hearing us talk," he asserted. Nothing has done more to give publicity to Washington than this gift of friendship from Japan.

"It is a shame to encroach on the Tidal Basin and its surroundings. The American people should be heard and they should protest. Besides, we do not know what this memorial would cost. We only know that the commission says $3,000,000."

Asks Full Explanation.

He asked that the "star chamber proceedings with which the Jefferson commission has thus far proceeded be ended and that the group be required to make a full explanation to Congress as to its justification for the Tidal Basin site and the future of the cherry blossoms before being allowed to proceed."

Reminded that the D. A. R. on Wednesday adopted a resolution condemning the proposal to interfere with the perennial floral display in West Potomac Park, Treadway said:

"Organizations throughout the country have been doing the same thing. There is still an opportunity for these people to be heard and, as their Representatives, we ought to give them a chance to be heard.

"Congress is entitled to more information than we have at present before proceeding to make an appropriation that will desecrate such a wonderful spot as now exists at the Tidal Basin."

Reading from yesterday's Post, he quoted the remarks of Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, a member of the memorial commission, which set forth his reasons why the trees should not be disturbed.

Hearings Open Today.

Among the organizations which have notified him they will be represented at the Library Committee hearing, opening at 10 a. m. today, said Wearin, are the American Federation of Arts, American Planning and Civic Association, American Institute of Architects, Washington Board of Trade and numerous others.

He said it is his understanding that the American Planning and Civic Association representative will urge passage of the resolution for an architectural competition. Its most prominent member and former president is Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt and chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The planning commission, incidentally, is expected to discuss the memorial project at its monthly meeting today.

Cherry Blossoms Are Out in Doubles

The doubles are out!

Parks authorities yesterday announced officially that the double Japanese cherry blossoms in East Potomac Park are on display and will be at their best over the coming week-end.

The showing, not expected until next week, was hastened by the heavy rains early yesterday.

Gunther's real dry, beery beer-flavor is not matched by other domestic beers

Americans are becoming real beer drinkers again! All over the country they are showing preference for dry, beery beers like Gunther's. More and more, people are turning away from the sweet-tasting concoctions of prohibition days.

Ask any old-time brew master. He'll shudder at the thought of those concoctions people called beer during prohibition. Home brew and "needle" beer made with sugar and raisins—sweet, "green" mixtures that quickly filled you up and left you feeling dull. He'll tell you that even today, while many beers are being made on the sweet side, the only real beers are those made like the old Bohemian and Bavarian brews. Light in body rather than heavy, they seem never to fill you up. Like a dry cocktail or a dry wine, they never spoil your appetite and yet they are extremely satisfying.

Gunther's is just such a beer. Made from the choicest imported hops, its flavor is unmatched by other domestic beers. That's why more of it is sold in this part of the country than any other beer. You'll find that in Milwaukee, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and other cities where good beers are made, the dry beer outsells sweeter beer by a wide margin. And here in Washington and Baltimore, Gunther's will be your favorite if you are a real beer drinker.

You'll never tire of the taste of Gunther's. Learn to know its dry, beery tang and you'll never want to drink any other kind. Order a case now and see for yourself how refreshing its flavor really is. Gunther Brewing Company, Inc., Baltimore, Md.

HERE'S TO A REAL BEER, dry and beery! Wherever real beer drinkers gather, you'll find the swing is away from sweeter brews to the beery flavor of an old-time lager like Gunther's. Made in the manner of the finest Bavarian and Bohemian beers, it's the kind that doesn't "fill you up." You can drink more of Gunther's—and you'll want to!

would be pressed into duty if the need arose.

Leaders besides Hapgood who were held for contempt were William J. Mackesy, chief C. I. O. organizer for Maine; Paul Salvaggio, Boston; Ernest Henry, Lynn, Mass.; John D. Nolan, Boston, and Martin J. Lawless, of Lynn, all C. I. O. organizers.

Judge Manser ordered that they be notified to appear before him Saturday to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt by reason "of the violation of the decree of temporary injunction."

Mackesy and Henry also were arrested for "riotous assault."

Word came from Washington tonight that Thomas W. Williams, labor dispute conciliator, was en route to help in attempts toward a settlement of the strike.

Mrs. Hill Granted Desertion Divorce

Baltimore, April 22 (AP).—Charges of desertion "bag and baggage" today won for Mrs. Suzanne Carroll Hill an absolute divorce from former Representative John Philip Hill.

Hill, who is a brigadier general in the National Guard, was ordered to pay costs of the proceedings. Judge George A. Solter signed the decree in Circuit Court.

No provision appeared in the decree regarding custody of the two minor children of Gen. and Mrs. Hill. The latter testified her husband had not lived with her as "man and wife" since March, 1932.

Both Gen. and Mrs. Hill are prominent here. They were married in 1913 and have three children. The oldest, Mrs. Suzanne Hill Clarke, lives at Hyattsville, Md.

A former member of the House of Representatives from a Baltimore district, Gen. Hill won fame during prohibition days when he made cider at his home here in defiance of dry laws.

Speaker Outlines Mission Progress

Methods and progress of missionaries in many parts of the world were outlined to members of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church last night by Mary Desiree Uline, national project secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Speaking at the weekly church night supper, Miss Uline told how American missionaries had gained success in carrying on social service and educational work, as well as preaching in India, China and the Philippines.

Miss Uline predicted that racial disturbances in South Africa would be likely in the near future unless Christian forces were increased there.

Mrs. Grant to Discuss Tuberculosis Situation

Various aspects of the tuberculosis situation in the District of Columbia will be discussed by Mrs. Ernest R. Grant before the Federation of Civic Associations at a meeting tonight at 9 o'clock, in the board room at the District Building.

The meeting and discussion will be open to the public, Woolsey W. Hall, federation president, announced last night.

Samoan Franchise Assailed

Secretary Swanson expressed opposition yesterday to a congressional proposal to grant United States citizenship to the 12,000 natives of American Samoa. He said Polynesian natives of the South Pacific Island "are not prepared to discharge the responsibilities of citizenship."

G.M. Officials, Union Heads Reach Agreement In Ontario Premier's Office to Call Off Strike

the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Union, No. 122, which called the strike at 20 hotels, and J. F. Friedrick, Federated Trades Council organizer, said the strikers were ordered to return to work immediately.

Terms of the temporary working agreement provide for a 54-hour week, wage increases of from 5 to 15 per cent and improvements in working conditions. The agreement will be in force pending a survey to standardize and classify hotel work.

New Jersey Strike Called.

Harrison, N. J., April 22 (AP).—A strike of workers at the Crucible Steel Co. plant here was called today by representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Samuel Rothbard, Newark counsel of the C. I. O., said more than 1,000 men were taking part in the strike, called, he said, because of delay in signing a contract and discrimination against men engaging in union activities.

Strikers Taunt Judge.

Philadelphia, April 22 (AP).—A common pleas judge suggested today that sit-down strikers at the Artcraft Silk Hosiery Mill be taken by the back of the neck and "put out."

"Why don't you take them by the back of the neck and put them out?" Judge Harry S. McDevitt asked Charles E. Fox, counsel for the company. "They are trespassers, are they not?"

"Let 'em try it," retorted the sit-downers when they learned of Judge McDevitt's remark. The number of strikers occupying the plant increased to more than 350 during the day.

Strike Clash Feared.

Stockton, Calif., April 22 (U.P.).—Rival pick-handle armies tonight prepared for battle as Stockton cannery operators announced an attempt would be made tomorrow to reopen the Stockton Food Products Co. plant, one of four vegetable canneries closed by pickets in a dispute centering around efforts to unionize California's agricultural labor.

A clash between union picket lines, attempting to keep the cannery closed, and the 1,000 to 1,500 deputies recruited by Sheriff Harvey Odell to "maintain law and order" appeared likely.

Ship Strike May Spread.

New York, April 22 (AP).—A threat that the longshoremen's strike might be extended today while officials of the International Longshoremen's Association and the National Independent Longshoremen's Union sought to unravel the jurisdiction tangle that already has tied up the docks of two large lines.

Members of the I. L. A. have refused to service ships of the Cunard White Star and Furness-Withy lines because they have employed at Montreal members of the independent union, which is not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Farm Leaders, Stirred by Pessimism of Wallace, Organize Campaign for Government Aid

By Russell Smith.

Leaders of farm organizations, reacting in orthodox fashion to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's pessimistic view of legislative prospects, yesterday began whooping up their followers for a concerted pressure on Congress to enact new props for agriculture

The new drive, which aims to incorporate in a single bill the demands of all farm organizations, was touched off with announcement by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, that, as chairman, he is calling members of the committee set up by last fall's farm conference to meet here within 10 days.

At that time the draft of the bill, now being worked out by federation officials in conjunction with counsel, will be laid before the committee. It is hoped the proposed bill can be presented to Congress shortly afterward, backed by the federation, the National Grange, the National Farmers Union and all other major groups.

O'Neal Favors Economy.

In his statement yesterday, O'Neal asserted he favors governmental economy but that it must not be achieved at the expense of farmers, who alone have not been aided by Federal or judicial action this year.

At the Capitol the predominant disposition was toward agreement with Wallace. Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture committee, said the whole program is "up in the air" as a result of the economy wave.

Jones occupies a strategic position. The $100,000,000 crop insurance bill, already passed by the Senate, is now in Jones' committee. Tenantry legislation, on the House calendar, hinges upon the vigor with which his committee pushes it. The granary bill, pet project of Wallace, must pass through the same committee.

In his statement, O'Neal said:

"We are for economy, but we are not for an economy that will paralyze agriculture. Our industry is basic, and it has been proved that the country can't prosper unless agriculture is prosperous. Labor is using its new weapon of collective bargaining power to secure higher wages, and industry is passing the increased wage costs on to the farmer in higher prices. The farmer can't arbitrarily pass his costs on in the form of higher prices, because he has no voice in setting prices."

"Our experience has proved, however, that we can, by orderly production, commodity loans and Government payments, stabilize farm commodity prices at fair levels. We have a new plan in the making that will be better than any heretofore tried out. It should result in stabilizing prices near parity levels, so that large benefit payments will not be necessary. The farmer wants a price, not benefit payments. Our farm prices are at approximate parity now, and we believe that if we will start from here in a program involving commodity loans, the ever-normal granary and a measure of production control, we can maintain a stable price structure, with a guarantee of abundant supplies of food and fiber for everybody.

"The farmer does not want unduly high prices, and he is willing to put a ceiling on his prices at parity levels if only the Government will give him a plan that will enable him to keep order in his own house.

"We have just concluded a conference of our executive committee and farmers representing the major crops, and we have agreed upon some principles that we will write into a new bill. In ten days or two weeks, when the bill is completed, we will come back to go over it and make any necessary changes before introducing it. Since farm prices are generally around parity levels, no large amount of money will be needed to maintain parity, and we believe that the new bill, if and when enacted into law, will receive much universal support among the farmers that the big majority will be willing to co-operate."

Father Divine's 'Heaven' Feels Heat of Law

Leader of Group Taken to Connecticut for Questioning.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—More official heat was turned on up in Father Divine's Harlem heaven today as two detectives left to bring the dapper little colored man back from Milford, Conn., to face an assault charge.

Assistant District Attorney John C. McDermott began an inquiry to determine the source of coal used to keep the peace mission warm for Divine's adoring "angels."

The prosecutor, assigned some months ago to halt the traffic in illicitly mined coal, voiced a suspicion that the fuel used at the place was of questionable origin.

Series of Blows.

This development followed a series of jarring blows that have shaken the serenity of Divine's heaven-on-earth during the last few days.

First there was an unholy rumpus when a process server tried to hand the self-ordained "messiah" a summons in a civil action while he was preaching a sermon.

Harry Green, a white man who had accompanied the process server to the mission, was stabbed in the abdomen. Three of Divine's colored followers were arrested.

The "Father" himself disappeared and was on the police fugitive list until Connecticut authorities found him at Milford today.

Meanwhile, there were signs of rebellion in the main heaven on West 115th street.

Women Cling to Property.

The corpulent woman known as "Faithful Mary," who had helped him organize his mission on a national scale, renounced his leadership and said she would refuse to turn over the heavenly properties held in her name.

His wife, known as "Mother Divine," announced from a hospital cot in Kingston that she likewise would refuse to part with a store held in her name at High Falls, N. Y.

And on the West Coast there was a Mann act charge pending against John W. Hunt, a white follower who was accused of seducing a Denver girl.

When word reached here that Divine had been found with several followers in the basement of a Milford house, Detectives Charles A. Bart and George Booker were sent to Milford to bring back the fugitive "messiah." He was wanted on a charge of "acting in concert" with the three men held in the stabbing affray.

Husband, 32, Is Bailed In Child Bride Case

Madisonville, Tenn., April 22 (AP). Homer Peels, 32-year-old Coker Creek mountaineer, returned to his child-wife, Geneva Hamby, late today after making bond of $250 on a warrant charging he had "fraudulently and wilfully" declared his bride was 18 years of age. The bride's mother has said Geneva is just 12.

The 6-foot husband will be given a preliminary hearing Friday, April 30, before Squire G. W. Kimbrough. He was arrested in his mountain home this morning by Deputy Sheriff S. B. Latimore.

3 British Ships Begin Attempt To Pass Blockade of Bilbao

Defy Rebel Ships in Effort to Take Food to Starving City; Shell-Wracked Madrid Cries for Revenge.

By the Associated Press.

St. Jean de Luz, France, April 22. Three British freighters steamed out of this port just before midnight tonight in an attempt to pass the Spanish insurgent blockade of government-held Bilbao and take food to near-starving inhabitants.

The ships were the Hamsterley, the MacGregor and the Stanbrook, all 2,000 tons.

The British government had warned against attempts to enter the harbor of Bilbao, 60 miles away, because it was believed dangerously mined, but the ships' owners were understood to have instructed the skippers to proceed.

British warships, however, had been authorized to escort the food-ships to within 3 miles of the shore.

As dense clouds of black smoke belched from each vessel and anchors were weighed, the great British battle cruiser Hood, lying just outside St. Jean de Luz, exchanged signals with the flotilla leader Faulknor.

It was believed the signals were intended to inform the destroyers Fortune and Forester of the departure of the three freighters. The Forester today had brought 200 refugees here from Bermeo, just west of Bilbao.

Madrid Wants Revenge.

Madrid, April 22 (AP).—Harassed defenders of Madrid, battered by the eleventh successive day of insurgent bombardment, watched new sections of the capital crumble under the force of high explosives today and saw more of its inhabitants killed and injured.

The city's fatalistic stoicism, transformed into fear as the incessant cannonading struck down more of its inhabitants, flared tonight into furious demands for violent action, no matter at what cost, to free the civilian population from the rain of shells. Cries for revenge arose and newspapers demanded "violence for violence."

Death Toll Mounts.

"There are many who think the sorrow of the Madrilenos cannot go without an adequate answer," said one newspaper, and warned insurgent cities they no longer have "any reason to be respected or to invoke elemental human rights."

The besiegers' batteries were stilled for a time by government cannon, but they showered the center of the city during the afternoon. At least 30 more fatalities were counted, bringing the list of dead in the 11 days to about 250. As many more have been injured.

Government batteries answered the fire during the forenoon, creating a diversion which enabled defense infantrymen to bend back the insurgents' lines at Usera, a workingmen's suburb on the southwest of the city, between the Toledo and Segovia bridges.

Rallying against a surprise insurgent attack, the government troops counter-charged and established a vanguard in the besiegers' previous front line, capturing 12 houses in an attack led by grenade-throwers.

Debris Litters Street.

Resumption of the insurgents' bombardment left great holes in the Gran Via, the "Broadway" of Madrid, and littered the broad thoroughfare with debris.

Most of those killed were struck by shrapnel.

As the firing diminished at nightfall, after more than a score of explosions in the theater and shopping districts, Madrilenos reappeared on the streets.

The situation of the crack insurgent garrison of 3,000 men, the "besieged besiegers" in University City, grew more critical. Gen. Jose Miaja, chief of Madrid's defense junta, attributed the continuing barrages to the insurgents' inability to rescue its isolated corps in the devastated education center.

Chilean Envoy Accused.

Valencia, Spain (Friday), April 23 (AP).—The Spanish government declared early today Aurelio Nunez Morgado, Chilean ambassador, was persona non grata in Spain.

It alleged Nunez Morgado attempted to take a large amount of securities out of Spain despite laws prohibiting such securities being taken from the country. The ambassador came to Valencia from Madrid Wednesday. He was about to board a plane for France when finance ministry agents searched his baggage and found the securities, said a semiofficial news agency, FABRA.

The agency alleged Morgado permitted buildings under his control in Madrid to become "veritbale espionage centers."

Report Bilbao Shelled.

Paris, April 22 (AP).—The Spanish government news agency said tonight insurgent artillery had begun to bombard the Basque capital of Bilbao. Shells landed among civilians, the dispatch from Bilbao said, but government guns silenced the insurgent bombardment.

Reich-Austria Auschluss.

One development since the two met last year was said to be the question whether Mussolini might relinquish his pledge to preserve Austrian integrity if Chancellor Hitler sought to effect a union with Austria.

Some diplomatic observers felt Mussolini might do this to enhance his friendship accord with Hitler. Some sources indicated the question was discussed today and might be carried further in talks between Il Duce and Hitler in Germany next month.

Schuschnigg and Mussolini were given an elaborate reception on their arrival. They attended a banquet and torchlight gondola parade down the Grand Canal tonight.

It costs over half a million more to make

WE'RE as thrifty as anybody. But when it comes to producing Four Roses, we prefer to use the most expensive whiskey-making methods there are.

These methods cost us over half a million dollars extra every year, but ah! ... how glorious they make Four Roses.

And it's easy to see why. For Four Roses, although all whiskey, is a combination of several straight whiskies. Each of these whiskies is distilled by the costly old-fashioned process. And each is outstanding for some particular virtue—aroma, or body, or smoothness, or flavor.

Blended together the way we've learned to blend them, these whiskies merge all their virtues into one whiskey—a whiskey of transcendent quality—Four Roses.

"But it costs me so little more to buy!"

"I FELT twice-lucky the day I discovered Four Roses. Lucky to find a whiskey with such grand all-round quality. Lucky to find that Four Roses costs only a quarter more a pint than the whiskey I'd been buying before!"

FOUR ROSES

We Believe Four Roses Is America's Finest Whiskey, Regardless of Age or Price

Frankfort Distilleries, Incorporated, Louisville and Baltimore, also make Paul Jones (92 proof), Old Oscar Pepper brand and Mattingly & Moore (both 90 proof)—all blends of straight whiskies. Also Paul Jones Four Star Gin (90 proof), distilled from 100% grain neutral spirits.

Traffic Planning.

Col. Sultan's appeal for high-speed elevated boulevards, and underpasses beneath congested circles, should hasten approval of a comprehensive traffic survey in Washington. At best several years would be required to carry out a program of this sort. Unless preliminary plans are launched in the near future traffic tie-ups in the rush hours may become well nigh intolerable.

Any plan for construction of elevated speedways will have to be most carefully developed. In special cases, such as the proposed link between K street and the Key Bridge, the arguments for an overhead roadway are forceful. No doubt the same idea might be applied to relieve other traffic bottlenecks. But how could it be effectively introduced into the downtown area without seriously impairing the attractiveness of the city? That problem will require the most careful study, with consideration of subways as an alternative.

There seems to be little doubt as to the desirabilty of tunneling under Dupont and Thomas circles and perhaps some others. With a separation of grades at these strategic points some of the worst sources of congestion would be relieved. The Engineering Department can not be too quickly instructed to proceed with various alternative studies in this field.

Funds for this work can be obtained from an increase in the gasoline tax. And Washington motorists would not resent a higher levy upon the fuel they use if the money were sure to result in the relief of sluggish traffic.

These proposed changes would not, of course, solve the entire problem. Along with them should go still more comprehensive planning to avoid the crowding of more enormous Government buildings—and memorials—in one section of the city. Relief of congestion will become more and more urgent, regardless of improved facilities, unless it is tackled from the viewpoint of prevention.

Industrial Anarchy.

Senator La Follette did well to recall to the stand a witness who, after his last appearance before the Civil Liberties Committee here, claims to have been threatened with death.

The incident indicates that the elements responsible for the prolonged reign of terror in Harlan County, Kentucky, may have to be taught respect for law. The committee's spotlight has emphasized the thinly veiled terrorism which long has ruled there. If violence would prevent further exposure, now coming home directly to those responsible for a long series of lawless acts against union members, there are some who might forget that Washington "is not Harlan County."

The Civil Liberties Committee has complete public backing in its effort to ferret out those responsible for any attempts at intimidation. And if there is more to be learned the committee should continue its hearings until every aspect of industrial feudalism in Harlan County, or elsewhere, is thoroughly portrayed.

Survivor Annuities.

Among other recommendations for liberalizing the retirement act is one providing that payment shall be extended to a surviving dependent of the annuitant.

Properly safeguarded against the abuses that make elderly pensioners the prey of designing persons, there is much to be said in favor of survivor annuities. The average Federal employe is not in a position to save much while actively employed. When he retires, his pension is as a rule extremely small and saving becomes even less likely. Indeed, the retired civil servant is fortunate if he can support himself and a dependent without drawing upon saved capital or asking aid.

For that reason, proposals to advance the retirement age are opposed by those in the service, if any element of compulsion is involved. But this argument would lose much of its force if the retired worker had any assurance that a wife or dependent minor would be provided for upon his death.

Under reasonable restrictions to prevent abuse, payment of annuities to survivors would make it easier for the Government to weed out incompetents. Thus any additional cost entailed by the extension of the pension system would be to some extent offset by raising standards of efficiency. Employes' morale also would be improved by affording increased protection to dependents.

No Case For The Memorial.

None of the many convincing arguments against the Jefferson Memorial project was answered by Representative Boylan in his labored defense of the plan on the floor of the House. And the apparent inability of the commission's chairman to make out any case for its ill-judged proposal will naturally redouble the growing demand that the present extravagant scheme be dropped.

Indeed, Mr. Boylan shows a pathetic ignorance both of the extent and nature of the opposition. This originated, he claims, "with a group of architects on Uncle Sam's pay roll, for the most part engaged on relief-agency jobs." If this were true, there would be no ground for criticism. The collective pay checks of the architects referred to would have to run a long time to equal the commission offered John Russell Pope. And it is a curious honor to Jefferson to intimate that those working for the public have no right to an opinion on the character of the memorial the favored Mr. Pope has designed.

But it is not true that opposition came first from the architects, though they more than others are in a position to understand the extent of the botchery which is contemplated. The opposition originated with Washingtonians as soon as they appreciated the extent of the ruin planned for beautiful Potomac Park. And as the nature of the projected vandalism becomes more clear the criticism broadens in proportion. Denunciation of the undertaking by the D. A. R. is only one of many illustrations of the national character of the issue.

Indeed it is international in scope. The Japanese may be too polite to speak their minds about the proposed uprooting of the cherry trees which they presented to this country as a token of growing friendship. But that is the sort of crude and totally unnecessary offense which cannot be either forgotten or forgiven by a proud and sensitive people. Mr. Boylan says blithely that thousands of new cherry trees—American trees—can be planted to replace those sent from Tokyo. He misses the entire point.

"The changed topography" of Potomac Park, the chairman of the commission predicts, will be lovely again "when I have served my span." It is quite possible that a generation from now the new layout around the Tidal Basin would be reasonably attractive, in spite of the gridwork of paved streets which Mr. Boylan thinks "will be worked out to the satisfaction of the public."

But no convincing reason is yet advanced for ruining something which is now beautiful on the assumption that in the distant future it may perhaps be beautiful again. The people of Washington want to enjoy the mellow charm of Potomac Park during this and successive summers. As warm weather approaches, the prospect of having this pleasure ground converted into a wasteland of steam shovels and concrete mixers is appalling. There is no sense in it.

The financial side of the proposed wreckage seemingly does not concern Mr. Boylan. "We do not presume," he says, "to set up our judgment" on whether the foundations of the memorial will be secure, or whether they would be laid "at a prohibitive cost." But to a public very deeply concerned by continuing deficit financing this is a very important point. If the memorial were appropriate, if the setting were desirable, if there were none of the contemplated destruction involved, all this would still be a matter in which the claims of economy are vital. In the case of a project so susceptible to condemnation from a very esthetic viewpoint the case for halting this tragic waste of public funds is paramount.

Thomas Jefferson, apostle of simplicity, frugality and unpretentious Americanism, would himself be the first to oppose so pitiful a travesty of his ideals. Everything about the memorial project runs counter to the spirit of the man who chose as his last resting place a simple hillside vault amid the woods of Monticello. It is only the cement and marble interests which are honored by this grandiose and ornate proposal. Fortunately the President's plea for economy improves the prospects of averting as tragic a blunder as has ever threatened Washington.

Neighbors' Plight.

The press and screen have reflected so many scenes of drought in the Midwest during the past two years that the country might be presumed to have a fair concept of what want of rain can mean. But how mild was America's misery—or, perhaps, how effective its efforts to frustrate the weather's wrath—is indicated by current news from across the Pacific. In Szechuan, the "Texas" of western China, more than 50,000 are reported to have starved to death when their crops failed for lack of water.

Those who have read Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth," or seen the film dramatization of the story, will appreciate something of the tragedy. The many thousands, too, who remember Anne Lindbergh's description of her husband's flight up the flooded Yellow River will have a vivid picture of the mad horror that a vagary of nature in a primitive part of the world can produce.

In these times, of course, primitive sections of the world are not remote. Science has greatly shrunk the size of the earth by many devices of rapid communication and transportation. Many see in this phenomenon the seeds of a catastrophic world war, reasoning that closer contacts mean higher friction. Close contacts, however, achieved by the printed word and flickering film, also induce greater understanding. And understanding is a cooling lubricant.

A Bear By The Tail.

Arguments in favor of packing the Supreme Court have been steadily giving way since the proposal was first subjected to critical analysis. The collapse of plans for revival of control over farm crops is merely another incident in the drama. Yet it is significant because this retrenchment originated with the President himself.

When Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress for the privilege of appointing six new Supreme Court justices, his request was regarded as a forerunner of new legislation in behalf of labor and agriculture. No doubt the President relied upon the influence of these two economic groups to push his plan through Congress. But the outlook for farm and labor legislation has undergone far-reaching changes since February 5.

Two Supreme Court decisions have removed constitutional barriers in the field of labor legislation. All doubt that the States may fix reasonable minimum hours and wages for groups in need of public protection seems to have been removed by the decision in the West Coast hotel case. The opinion upholding the Wagner act has opened the way for adjustment of labor disputes by collective bargaining.

Some groups would like to see Congress set up standards for wages and hours. Since the right of collective bargaining has been definitely established, however, employers and employes can more effectively work out problems of this sort around the council table. Certainly there is no emergency demanding revolutionary measures to protect the interests of labor. And even if new legislation were required, it might be so drafted as to satisfy existing constitutional requirements.

Now the farm program also has been abandoned. In this case the unbalanced budget proved a more formidable obstruction than the opinion invalidating the AAA. New farm-control measures must at least await the discovery of additional revenue or the achievement of economy. The President has decided that uncontrolled spending is a greater menace than uncontrolled agricultural production.

What reason now remains for packing the Court, even if that were a legitimate means of attaining the new power which the Administration seeks? In a democratic country it is impossible to justify an assault upon the judiciary merely because its decisions may restrain executive or legislative acts. And in this case it does not even appear that the New Deal is being restrained in any substantial particular. If the Administration continues to press its fight against the court under these circumstances, it will raise an unwelcome presumption that some completely undisclosed control scheme is contemplated.

That, of course, is a matter of conjecture. In view of recent developments it appears more likely that the President has a bear by the tail and is afraid to let go.

The Decatur House.

The Decatur house on Lafayette Square will be open to the public today and tomorrow. Through this courtesy of the owner, the Naval Historical Society seeks to raise funds for the coming year. Visitors will be amply repaid by a taste of old Washington atmosphere to be equaled in few other spots in the city. For the walls of the Decatur house, since their first hand-made brick was laid in 1819, have looked down on many of the foremost notables who have strutted the Capital scene during the past century or more.

Stephen Decatur, of "Old Ironsides" fame, built the house with his prize money won in the Tripoli campaign. At the time, the White House was the only other building on what was then known as President's Square. But within a year the commodore was dead of wounds received in a duel near Bladensburg. The house was then passed down through a long and varied list of owners.

Judah P. Benjamin, born in the West Indies and destined to become Secretary of State for the Confederacy, once possessed it. Baron Hyde de Neuville, representative of one of the most aristocratic families of the old regime in France, used it for his residence while Minister in Washington. Likewise, it was once the Russian Legation here. Henry Clay occupied the house as Secretary of State for John Quincy Adams. Sir Charles Vaughan, British Minister, lived in it. Others housed there included George M. Dallas, Vice President with Polk; Edward Livingston, Secretary of State under Jackson, and Edward Fitzgerald Beale, hero of the Mexican War and later Minister to Austria.

Today it is still in the Beale family and is thus closely associated with our naval traditions. It is peculiarly appropriate, then, that its mellow halls and antique garden should be made available to further the Naval Historical Foundation which is dedicated to the preservation of items pertaining to the history of the United States Navy and merchant marine.

A few days ago a Memphis man who walked into a moving automobile was later apprehended and fined $25 for reckless walking. A hit-and-run pedestrian is something new under the sun.

Union Responsibility.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading through the statements of Miss Perkins, Secretary of Labor, she invariably refers to industry as "Management," never as "Ownership." I wonder if the people at large are aware of this Russianistic trend of thought which denies to owners the things that are guaranteed under the Constitution, so glibly quoted by strike agitators and other levelers.

Some of these days "Management" may become nauseated and start a sit-down strike against having a lot of labor-fakirs telling them how to conduct their business. A dozen large concerns with closed doors for a few months would change the "share your wealth" tune to "brother can you spare a dime" and it is high time for labor leaders to understand this.

It is time to compel all labor unions to incorporate, open their books, and thus assume some degree of responsibility. As matters stand an agreement with a labor union isn't worth the paper on which it is written. I wonder if Congress has the "guts" to amend the Wagner act to make it fair and square.

Still More On The Memorial Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of April 21 a writer arrives at the morose conclusion that opposition to the Jefferson Memorial is motivated by hysteria; that the advocates have the corner on calm thought and calm analysis.

That depends upon your definition of hysteria. Whether you mean the hysteria of the planners, engineers, et al., who hooked and right-crossed the parks with concrete—as witness Franklin Park, which only needs an entry to fit its center patio as an ideal parking lot—or of citizens who looked askance at results likely to follow bestowal of a million dollars to "improve and remake the parks."

A comparison between the Lincoln and proposed memorial is hardly valid. The former improved a reclaimed malarial swamp. The latter, a finished park, not a swamp.

The Lincoln Memorial's economic value to tourist bureaus, rail traffic and our merchants is beyond dispute—though I maintain visitors would come here anyhow. I hold this is no argument for building still another. One is enough. Give the "city of monuments" a breathing spell. Citizen societies—cranks, of course!—are solidlly against it.

If hysteria will stop it in time—let's have more hysteria!

FRANKENSTEIN JUNIOR.
Washington, April 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: So far the new abattoir is the only utilitarian enterprise which has not been suggested as a fitting memorial to our great apostle of beauty and the joys of the spirit.

Who, with even the most superficial acquaintance with Mr. Jefferson's life and writings, can doubt that he would (to use his own words) "fall in love" with Mr. Pope's beautiful design, as he "fell in love" with the Hotel de Salm and the Maison Carree?

In the midst of so much hysterical nonsense, how refreshing and delightful is the letter of F. K. O'Brien in The Post of April 21, with its reasonable and lucid exposition of the overwhelming case in favor of the memorial as planned. Heartiest thanks to him (or her) from all who believe that Shakespeare's sonnets will outlive the poems of Mr. Edgar Guest, and from all who feel that the proper place for the old swimming hole is not in the middle of the Acropolis.

H. M. BONSAL.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All Washingtonians who are trying to "save the Basin," as well as those who are trying to destroy it, will be interested in the following words of Thomas Jefferson, quoted by Mrs. Samuel Harrison Smith in her journal of the year 1837 and published in "Forty Years of Washington Society" under the editorship of the late Gaillard Hunt:

The lady says: "I remember on one occasion (it was after he was President) his exclaiming, 'How I wish that I possessed the power of a despot.' The company at table stared at a declaration so opposed to his disposition and principles. 'Yes,' continued he, in reply to their inquiring looks, 'I wish I was a despot that I might save the noble, the beautiful trees that are daily falling sacrifices to the cupidity of their owners or the necessity of the poor.' 'And have you not authority to save those on the public grounds?' asked one of the company. 'No.' answered Mr. J., 'only an armed guard could save them. The unnecessary felling of a tree, perhaps the growth of centuries, seems to me a crime little short of murder; it pains me to an unspeakable degree.'"

MARY BENNETT DURAND.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why not honor Jefferson by erecting a beautiful arch, either on Constitution avenue or at the entrance of one of our bridges or public parks, where it can be easily seen by our visitors, who increase in numbers with each year? No one who has seen the Arc de Triomphe in Paris or the Marble Arch in London can ever forget their dignity, beauty and stateliness. These will stand when all other buildings in Paris and London will be in ruins.

Of ancient buildings only pyramids and arches survive. Pyramids add interest to the landscape, but arches are ever a symbol of grace and dignity. America has two arches, neither important, one in New York, one in Brooklyn.

MRS. CHARLTON M. CLARK.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All credit to the ladies of the G. A. R. in the forceful stand they have taken in opposition to packing the Supreme Court and the destruction of the Japanese cherry trees. If the women of Washington will as valiantly defend our beautiful city against a lot of marauding vandals, destroyers of all that is worth while, not only in our own city, but all over the Nation, Washington may continue to be the loveliest city in the world and our Nation the greatest of all.

A PATRIOTIC MOTHER.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In my opinion it would be a national mistake to disturb the Tidal Basin, in Washington, and its environment. I visited the splendid floral display there a few days ago, as I have done many times before. I was impressed particularly by what seemed to be the general feeling, in which I share, that this is something that belongs to the United States, not alone to Washingon.

A. O. H. GRIER.
Wilmington, Del., April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The following gives my attitude as to the cherry blossoms:

Most rare and fragrant of the flowers along Potomac's revered stream; reflected from the Basin's depth, their glorious petals gleam. Kind hearts of Eastern empire thrill as with this wide-flung picture fair come thoughts of distant, lacy strands and loved mem'ries there. The woodland elves of all the earth dance nightly 'neath the blossoms there, yet only youthful hearts may know the fairy secrets of the fair.

Could Jefferson, beloved, return with thought to change a scene so fair, we'd see him wave it all aside and leave the glorious blossoms there. Whoever swings the ax which mars beyond recall such beauty rare; a thoughtful pause would stay his hand and leave them in their beauty there.

Georgetown And Dictatorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When an educational institution like Georgetown University confers an honorary doctor of laws degree on a head of a government that bears many signs of dictatorship, then even Catholics will ask themselves how much the spirit of Catholic institutions has changed and how deeply are they engaged in politics. As a Catholic, doubts and skepticism have invaded my mind.

Last night I saw Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippines, receive an honorary degree at Georgetown. I couldn't help but feel, as I saw the ceremony, that here was an institution that stood for liberty, for liberalism, for democracy, for truth, for representative government and for God sweeping aside all these things to honor a public official who by self-confession believes that personal freedom is nothing but social fiction and a fetish and that the first and paramount duty of a citizen is to his government, the very idea of a Hitler, a Stalin, a Mussolini.

Besides, at the eucharistic congress held in Manila three months ago didn't Mr. Quezon unnecessarily absent himself by sailing for the United States a month before the scheduled time? Not that I would hold it to be his bounden duty to attend the congress, but it would be a mark of courtesy on his part to be in Manila when his nation was the guest of a great international gathering. Chief executives of other nations have done that.

As an American citizen I resent Mr. Quezon's criticism of our institutions, Government and Constitution while he is here on an official mission to our Government. His enthusiastic praise of the Mexican President and government, which have proscribed the Catholics in that country and consider a dictatorial government to be the best, is a key to his own conception of the kind of government that he wants.

I am for immediate Philippine independence, without any further political relations or commercial arrangement of any kind. Let Mr. Quezon have his independence and then he can leave us alone here.

Prohibition And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the Women's Christian Temperance Union holds its convention in Washington in June, it will be generally presumed that their primary interest is the promotion of temperance. The fact that the Union is committed to the theory of prohibition by law—a theory diametrically opposed to true temperance—is apt to be forgotten.

Let us hope that these good women to whom many look for guidance and inspiration will, before they follow too far after false gods, give heed to what prohibition means to the homes and the youth of the country.

Of all organizations, the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice has the greatest opportunity to make an impartial study of the causes of crime. And this is what the head of that bureau recently said:

> I cannot forget for a moment that 17 per cent of our crime is being committed by youths of less than voting age. To bring about this horrible picture, our American civilization somewhat has failed. Our bulwark of civilization is the home and the family.
> Therefore, if our civilization has failed, our families have failed and our home government has failed . . . Frankly, much of this in the opinion of many, came through prohibition. Many of the youths who are today in prison were taught their lesson in the American home. What is implied is that prohibition brought about a false set of conditions which sent the former convict, the crook, the burglar, the thief and the murderer into our homes and to our firesides in the guise of the bootlegger, and weakened public morale to an extent that duties toward the young in education, in conduct and example were overthrown and certain fundamental and traditional policies were forgotten.

A Fig For Adventure

It is raining here in the tropics, and my adventure has turned sour. If it had not been for some of those colorful travel folders and several books about the charms of distant places, I should be at home. I wish I were. As it is, I have not seen "the languorous tropic isles" or the "beckoning beaches and swaying palms," as advertised. All I can see is gray sheets of water, and I am told that it rained for 18 days last month. I cannot write home about my adventures, because I have had none. And I say, "a fig for adventure!"

Yesterday I met a man bound up the Amazon to do some business connected with rubber. If that is adventure, he did not seem to be enjoying it, for I can't remember ever having seen a more morose individual. "Native life comes and goes in a blaze of sunshine, color and laughter," the travel folder says, but I have been talking to a man who is a driller and rigger for one of the big oil companies in Venezuela, and he often exiles himself for months at a time with natives; everywhere he goes he has to carry a revolver at his belt.

At the next table to mine in this little old hotel are three engineers down here to supervise a building project. When they were in college they probably dreamed of being sent to the tropics to do just that. They regarded it as adventure justifying all the hard work required to fit themselves for the responsibility. But now their whole conversation seems to concern which of them can complete his part of the project first, and get back home. They talk about what things they will do, what they will have to eat, what they will buy, where they will go. And at another table is one of their countrymen, resident representative of a large firm at home. He is engaged in a feud with the engineers, so they do not speak. It might as well be in a New York boarding house, except that the food here is worse, and there is no escape from it.

There isn't anything to read. The "library" is limited to Steamship Sailings, the American Exporter, the Manchester Guardian Weekly (six months old), three frayed copies of the Saturday Evening Post, and, so help me, six travel folders.

The only thing to do in the evening, after dinner, is to talk about things until 9:30, when everyone is so bored that bed is inevitable. One engineer delivers a monologue every evening at 8, admission free, about how he built the Alaskan Railroad, assisted by one or two other men. Another tells harrowing experiences in the back country where man's invasion is stoutly contested by the native fauna. Last night we had a new performer, a big, handsome man, who wrings concessions from governments everywhere, knows exactly what is going on in the chancelleries of the world, and advises rulers what to do. It may not have been wholly true, but it was better than any story in Steamship Sailings, so we listened.

The stars here are beautiful at night, or so I am told. And so are the sunsets, and the blue sea; the breezes are balmy and sweet, and peace and quiet pervades. All that is what I read in a book about this particular place. But the other night I met the man who wrote the book! I also almost met the man who found a little island of his own, where he could be king, escape taxes, and live in a perfect climate. Unfortunately he left last week to accept a job in New York.

I'll be going home myself next week, and I think I will stay for a while. Adventure is overrated. Real adventures say that adventurers do not have adventures because they plan their adventures too carefully in advance to have anything unexpected happen. The unexpected is what makes adventure, so that theoretically it is only the blunderer who has the adventures, unless he deliberately goes out to seek them and make them in order to write about them—in which case he is no adventurer at all.

Real adventure is near at hand, anyway, in the little things, in friendships, in thoughts, and in ideas. The great adventurers are the men and women who go exploring in the realm of ideas. They have great experiences, perhaps without leaving their chairs. But they have to impose a strict discipline upon themselves, and that is why few of us have such adventures. We enjoy our comfort too much.

My idea is to relax in a comfortable chair on a screened porch, attached to a small cottage, and overlooking a quiet lake somewhere. Then give me a book to read and I'll be satisfied. What book? Oh, well—do you happen to have a good story of adventure?

Horse And Buggy Age.

The problem now before Mayor Holt and a committee of Kokomo citizens is to try to find a place to park the horses and buggies of members of the Amish community.

The Amish, who are numerous in a settlement northeast of the Howard County metropolis, have religious scruples against the use of the automobile. They go to town to do their shopping, and that has involved no little risk and trouble in recent years. Since there are no livery stables to which the horses may be taken, the Amish ask for a parking lot of their own, and seem likely to get it.

Fair Enough

Westbrook Pegler

Florida Neighbors.

Sarasota.

THIS LIVING, human document is being composed on controversial ground, for it was here that Aleck Troyanovsky, the Ambassador from the Soviet government, recently spent a vacation as neighbor to Prince Michael Cantacuzene, late aide-de-camp to the Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of all the armies of the last Czar of Russia.

The Gulf View Inn is a sort of barracks, a rough-hewn lodge close to the most beautiful shore that your correspondent has ever seen, and is conducted by William Whipple, who came here from New Jersey during the great Florida boom and got beached.

It seems to be widely unknown at the moment, and there are those who deplore public mention of the place lest it becomes popular and crowded with others like themselves who found on the Gulf coast of Florida complete detachment from work and the dress-up formality of the famous resorts of the Atlantic shore.

The green water of the Gulf mutters day and night on a beach as fine as baby powder 15 yards from the front stoop, and big fish are seen doing high jumps a half-mile offshore.

Your correspondent has found much to deplore in the political and social life of Florida. The corruptest State in the American Union and the most brutal in its idolatry of the dollar had no fault to find with Mr. Troyanovsky's hideout on the Gulf. Surely that is praise, considering that your correspondent has never been accused of boosting anyone or anything unduly.

• • • •

AS BETWEEN the Soviet Ambassador and Prince Mike Cantacuzene, there is no doubt that Mike saw Sarasota first. He was once the husband of Julia Dent Grant, a granddaughter of Ulysses, the unhappiest President of them all, and he is some sort of in-law to the inn-keeping Potter Palmer outfit of Chicago, who used to have silver dollars set in the flagged floor of the barber shop of their hotel.

There was a Silver Dollar Saloon in Denver later on and another Silver Dollar Saloon down on the old line in Chicago, but the idea of setting silver bucks into a tiled floor seemed to have originated with the old bull of the Palmer herd, and his many descendants may never be able to live down the gross vulgarity of that display.

The Palmers hate to be known as descendants of an inn-keeper, which is why your correspondent loves to rub it in; but if, some distant day, the descendants of Mr. Whipple hate to be known as the scions of an inn-keeper, you rub it in and remind them that, like old man Palmer, he ran a good house.

Prince Mike is a little guy with chin whiskers who was hit twice in the war before he got appointed aide-de-camp to Grand Duke Nicholas, and his adventures leading up to his escape from Russia after the revolution are no more shocking than the stories of some of the revolutionaries who took their bumps at the hands of his class before the revolt.

Anyway, he has been down here a long time since managing properties for the old inn-keeper family, and he was once head man and editorial writer for a Sarasota paper which the Palmers own. He has made friends with a local alligator which comes bellying up to his place to pass the time of day and mooch a faceful of red meat as the guest of a Russian prince, and the people like him, for everybody calls him Mike—and him a prince and late aid to the commander in chief of all the armies of the Czar of all the Russias!

• • • •

WHEN TROYANOVSKY hove up to the Gulf View old Mike said he ought to be sent back to Russia, and throughout Aleck's stay at Mr. Whipple's plant Mike gave the place plenty of room and did not meet the enemy, although Aleck had friends in town who were friends of Mike and poured him a shot now and then. You might have expected old Mike to walk into the place one night, with his orders on his chest and a musket on his arm, to blow the man through, but nothing of the kind occurred, and Aleck, the Ambassador, finished out his stay and went back to Washington without incident, as they say.

But Troyanovsky, like old Mike himself, was once an officer in the army of the Czar, and they might have had a pleasant evening over a noggin of something, 'way over on the other side of the world, reminiscing of the old country and the war and knocking political fungoes as one man to another, if Mike had been limber enough to make the first bend. What could it matter now? Not even Mike could argue that his Czar was worth his weight in garbage or defend the dreadful stupidity of his own class in Russia.

But Mike kept his distance, and Troyanovsky turned his belly to the sun on Sarasota Beach by day, and when night came on attacked the lone slot machine in the lobby of the lodge with a vast fund of quarters, like all the other hated bourgeoisie who punt endlessly for the fabulous big casino. Hundreds of times the Ambassador of the Soviet Socialist Republics pulled the crank and watched the wheels go 'round, but he never hit the jackpot and went away defeated and chagrined, perhaps kicking himself for a blurry, ruddy, bloody sucker and a fool, even as your correspondent.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Spring, Official.

There's a kick I get each springtime
When the skies begin to clear,
And it boosts me out of boredom
And it fills me full of cheer;
When the mailman comes and leaves it
Then my joy is most intense;
It's my golf club's printed folder
Headed "Program of Events."

II.

When the flu is just abating
And to sneezing I'm still prone,
And I've spent two dozen week-ends
On some drug-store telephone,
There's one thing that seems to lift me
Driving all my cares away;
It's my golf club's yearly program
Of the days of special play!

III.

When the roads are still quite sloppy
And the detour signs abound;
When it seems as if the summer
Wouldn't ever come around;
When the winter seems eternal
Then there's one thing makes me gay—
It's that golf-club salutation
And the heading, "Opening Day."

IV.

When I've spent the whole damned winter
Taking medicines and pills
And I'm sitting meditating
On the range of human ills;
When I'm feeling low and cranky
Just one thing can rescue me—
"Springtime Tournament for Classes
A and B and C and D."

V.

When the birdies fail to stir me
And the laughing daffodils
Leave me quite unmoved and cheerless
And I'm white beneath my gills,
Misery is my companion—
Till the mailman comes along
With the formal spring golf program
Of the club where I belong.

VI.

You can have your fields of tulips—
Help yourself to buzzing bees!
Take your load of piping robins—
I don't fall for such as these;
Spring is here and it's here only—
And it cannot come before
I receive that golf-club folder
With those tournaments galore!

In Harlan County

Observer Familiar With Kentucky Mines Analyzes Social Influences Behind La Follette Committee Findings.

By Don K. Price, Jr.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THERE IS not much doubt as the Senate civil liberties committee continues to probe the iniquities of Harlan County, that the Kentucky mountains have been experiencing some industrial debates which by comparison make their traditional feuds seem polished repartee. The labor situation is scarcely handled with kid gloves and legal technicalities in Harlan, and the public has a natural inclination to side with the under-dog, even though all the rough work has not been on the part of the mine operators.

As the instructive details of collusion between mine bosses and sheriffs are revealed, representatives of business and government all over the country will feel impelled to cite Harlan as a shocking exception in a well-ordered world. The public will agree and then dismiss the subject on the grounds that the Kentucky mountains have always been uncivilized anyhow. It is very much like the story of the mother who asked the teacher to spare Johnny when he misbehaved, but to whip the boy next to him as an example— except that the American public, by making scapegoats of Harlan operators in particular, will probably decide that the country in general has no sins worth taking seriously.

Harlan County is a laboratory of labor trouble. Its open labor warfare, and the divergent economic assumptions which underlie it, point to two conclusions. First, Harlan is experiencing in three decades an adjustment in industrial organization and ideas that caused other parts of the country growing pains for nearly a century. Second, the spectacular nature of Harlan's disagreement is due not so much to the native cussedness of certain operators as to kinks in our national economy that are causing more favored sections of the country plenty of trouble.

County Was Frontier Only A Generation Ago.

LESS THAN 30 years ago Harlan County was frontier country. The war came and brought soaring coal prices. Great industrial corporations decided to expand vertically and bought tremendous tracts of coal property. Smaller operators opened all the other available seams and sold anything resembling coal that would sputter in a hot fire. As for their employes, mountaineers flocked into the mining camps, leaving behind their razor-back hogs and cabins, but bringing with them a taste for gunplay and hard drinking combined with an absolute belief in the rights of property and a hard God. They had rarely seen enough cash to pay for their patent medicines, but during the war they earned such sums as $20 a day and found more riotous Saturday nights the only way to spend them.

On the land along the headwaters of the Cumberland River, worthless for any kind of mining, there grew up tiny trading villages that became the miners' only places of entertainment and refuge from the power of the mine owners. Thus there developed almost overnight within the county three distinct types of localities: large mining camps, owned by powerful companies, often branches of great industrial corporations of the North; small camps, with less technical facilities, less valuable seams of coal, and less control over their employes, and little independent villages, where men with either legitimate grievances or a dislike for sober work could be comparatively independent of the power of mine owners.

In prosperous times this produced an atmosphere of virile lawlessness that a local Bret Harte might well have celebrated, had not John Fox, jr., spoiled the Kentucky mountains forever for any except pallid and sentimental local color. In dozens of roaring camps, miners and mine owners grew rich according to their standards. The miners, fresh from mountain furrows, bought automobiles and bad whisky and learned to play pool. The mine operators, many of them of native stock, bought automobiles and bad whisky and learned to play golf. Thus two classes were created in the county by a world war and the construction of a railroad. And over both of them hovered the impersonal might of the Northern corporations, whose strength was symbolized by the long lines of gondolas bearing internationally known trademarks that coasted down out of the hollows on their way to the region of the Great Lakes.

Freight Differentials And Depression Introduced.

THEN CAME depression, reinforced by freight differentials that, according to Kentuckians, favored Pennsylvania coal in the traffic to the Lakes. Even with nonunion wages many of the independent operators could not meet the competition. The extent of their generosity in maintaining wages and living conditions at personal loss was probably not much greater than that of other business men. The difference was that the mine operator controlled all the economic relationships of his men. He owned the commissaries in which they bought their blasting powder and their wives' cosmetics, the houses in which they lived, and the doctors who took more or less care of them. With no unions to deal with, there was little check on his authority except by resort to violence.

In hard times the violence broke out, naturally enough, in the areas normally least subject to law and order, where no reputable citizen would ever have ventured on Election Day. It was encouraged by sincere organizers, and by organizers who measured their success by headlines in the Daily Worker rather than by benefits to the local worker. It was ballyhooed by such famous personages as Theodore Dreiser, who tried to convince dubious mountaineers that their troubles were merely forerunners of a Marxian apocalypse. And its success was entirely in the little independent towns and the smaller mining camps that were already threatened with bankruptcy.

The NRA brought unions to all the Kentucky coal fields except Harlan County. The present investigation will undoubtedly make it difficult for the small Harlan operator to hold out against the trend. But the more important mines are those which are operated as mere units in giant industrial organizations. They do not depend on public good will for their market. They are located in mining camps that are unincorporated in spite of their size, and therefore have no municipal governments through which the miners might express their political desires. They are in several notable cases worked by immigrant miners who prove far more docile than the native stock. Thus their owners can maintain control over them fithout the clumsy show of force to which the smaller operators are driven.

Industrial History Of Nation Re-enacted.

THE INDUSTRIAL history of the United States had been compressed into a couple of decades in Harlan County, and it was more than either the miners or their employers could understand. From a frontier way of life to an economy under the control of strong industrialists, themselves in the grip of international economic forces was a change that produced problems insoluble by the economic and social ideas that the mine operators and miners held in common.

The influence of a few left-wing organizers on the thinking of the county was merely to scare many of the more reputable workers as well as all the operators and professional and commercial groups into a policy of repression. The American Legion led the way in denouncing as un-American any concessions to radicalism. The attitude of defense into which nearly the whole county froze was merely a caricature of the attitude adopted by the average American businessman under far less frightening conditions.

The Senate investigation is teaching the Nation what Kentuckians have deduced for a generation from the murder dockets of Harlan County, that there is something wrong with the basis of social organization in that region. The trouble will have to be treated as a symptom of a widespread economic ailment, rather than as a case of individual sin, before anything effective is done about it.

Rail Head's Wife Chosen American Mother of 1937

New York, April 22 (AP).—Mrs. Carl R. Gray, 67, of Omaha, Nebr., wife of the president of the Union Pacific Railroad, was chosen today "The American Mother of 1937" by a committee of the Golden Rule Foundation.

Mrs. Gray—mother of three children, grandmother of five and great-grandmother of one—will be a guest of the foundation in New York on Mother's Day, May 9, and will represent American mothers at programs in the city.

Mermaids for Fair.

San Francisco, April 22 (AP).—An application to display nude women as mermaids, with silver tails fastened to their feet, swimming in a huge glass tank was among nudist proposals on file today with officials of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

British Labor And Its Unions.

London.

FOR LIGHT RELIEF, London has met the strip-tease. And, as so often happens with American importations, London has maintained that what it saw was not the strip-tease, that the strip-tease was just another vulgar American invention and that in any case we thought of it first.

The first of these judgments was most certainly true, as anyone might have known in advance. For obviously what Westbrook Pegler calls Louse Opera cannot be put on an English stage. Which means not that our morals are high but that its spice is not to the taste permitted by our authorities. Nudity, just pointless nudity, you can see any day you want in London, and some of our comedians are expert at the giggle-provoking obscene dialogue which hints and points, but never touches. Clearly, we could not consistently ban the American strip-tease while we permit our own performances.

But Diane Raye's arrival in England was met by the doubtless hoped-for burst of publicity. We were urged to lick our lips. Tension rose as one theater manager turned the act down. Another manager announced he would go ahead. Miss Raye gave a preview before 40 pressman one afternoon, without the fixings proper to a theater or cabaret. Behind her loomed the London County Council, ready to pounce down on her, prosecute if it saw fit, but like the Supreme Court unwilling to rule in advance; in front of her sat 40 icebergs; she neither stripped nor teased but just quite nicely and decorously took some of her clothes off.

When the theater performance arrived, she took still less clothes off, and the public was protected from danger by violet lights and a violet gauze screen. The morality council, entrenched in the stalls announced this wasn't strip-tease in he American fashion, determined to have a representative at the theater each night to await developments. And that's the way it is; London hasn't got the strip-tease and Miss Raye has her publicity.

FOR MORE SOLID MEAT, London has labor trouble. In the growing number of labor disputes some of our scaremongers see a Red plot to spoil the coronation. London doesn't take that seriously, but the strikes it must. American papers often maintain that in England trade unionism is an accepted system throughout industry ant that by means of collective bargaining between labor and capital we have secured industrial peace. Neither of these ideas is entirely correct. The trade union system is certainly accepted, but not in all industries and by no means for even the majority of labor.

Trade unionism fought its early battles in England in the old industries: textiles, dockyards, shipbuilding, iron and steel, coal and so on. But the modern development of industry encouraged new industries, expanded the distribution system and fostered industrial growth in new areas. Here unionism is by no means supreme. Of some 13,500,000 possible unionists only just over 3,500,000 are members of affiliated unions. Less than a third of the labor force of the country is effectively unionized. And the attitude of the strong unions in the old industries is much more akin to that of the American Federation of Labor than to Mr. Lewis' industrial unions.

Their aims are higher wages, shorter hours for themselves within the existing industrial system. They are political conservatives in defense of their own interests. There are quarrels within the unions between the craftsmen who want to maintain, if not increase, their differential advantage over other labor, and nonskilled labor which is more willing to accept extreme doctrines. Somehow socialism became linked up with trade unionism, but the link is slender at present.

NOR IS IT entirely true to say that we have devised a peaceful method of settling all labor disputes. Certainly we have had more industrial peace than war since the General Strike of 1926. But before labor had recovered from the shock of defeat in that contest we were through the great depression and on the way to recovery. Throughout the depression up to the present time the cost of living for those in employment has been lower than ever before; labor has been enjoying during the past five to ten years the highest real wages in its history. And during the last four years unemployment has fallen steadily.

We have had industrial peace because labor has been prosperous. There are certain very prominent exceptions to this statement. Unemployment has been highly concentrated in certain areas and industries, although even in these there has recently been some improvement. Labor as a movement talked of the need of special measures to improve conditions, but it was not going out of its way to sacrifice its present prosperity even for the benefit of some 1,000,000 of its fellow members.

Economists for some time now have been seeing signs that real wages have turned a peak and are decreasing. They have talked of a possible inflation, have suggested methods of avoiding this danger and have seen the suggestions ignored by the rulers of the country. But theoretical signs of danger visible to economists are of no interest to the workingman so long as he sees and knows his present prosperity. There are signs now which not even the workingman may ignore for long. The cost of living is rising at quickening pace. Meat, vegetables, bread, clothes all cost more than they did a year ago. And exactly at this time comes an outburst af labor disturbances.

• • • •

THE STRIKES are numerous, but their objects are widely different. Outstanding are the engineers' strike on Clydeside, for higher wages; the threatened strike of London busmen for shorter hours; and the possible strike in the coal industry over the question of a company union. On Clydeside the strikers in Beardmores' plant are supported by the Glasgow and District Committee of the Amalgamated Engineers' Union, but criticized by the national executive of the same union which favors use of the established methods of conciliation. The engineers have a hard experience to remember, particularly on Clydeside, and are determined that this time they shall get justice.

The London busmen enjoy relatively high wages; in the east end of London a working girl considers she has done well by herself if she gets a busdriver or conductor for a husband. But the men protest they are being worked too hard, that bus schedules have been speeded up. The problem is complicated by the long time frequently necessary for men to get to and from their jobs, and by the financial position of the London Passenger Transport Board, which under the terms of its formation must pay this year a predetermined interest on its stock or else go into receivership. The men demand a 7½-hour day; the board say they can't afford it. And even if they don't grant the men's demands, it is likely that the interest required will not be earned.

The Nottinghamshire quarrel involves the Miners Federation, which has never been strong in this field, and a local union backed by the employers. Agreement had been reached, but the federation fears victimization, demands recognition by the employers and guarantees against victimization. A ballot is to be taken over the whole coal industry to decide whether a national strike should be called to protect official trade unionism. The threatened strike comes just as agreement had been reached in South Wales on much more important questions of wages.

These strikes may be symptomatic of the times. It is expected that they will become more frequent and bitter as the cost of living rises. Main cause of that rise in cost of living will be the re-armament program, and it is a frequently voiced criticism of the government that it has so far refused to take the trade unions into its confidence and make them part of the national effort toward re-armament.

Foolproof Crossings.

Foolproof railway crossings is one of the modern ideas.

Last year, some 3,514 motorists tried to beat the train to the crossing. Eighty-three percent of these did it in daylight and presumably with their eyes open. In 34 per cent of night-crossing accidents, motorists ran into the side of the train back of the engine. The inference is that they were either unbelievably careless or that the crossings were unlighted.

Right now, some $200,000,000 is being spent on the elimination of 2,097 grade crossings. More than a thousand others will be guarded by safety devices. The country was interested in foolproof safety ideas at crossings to the extent of $131,133,227 last year.

Manila's Reaction

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

WHILE THE MORE discerning portion of the Philippine press was hailing the manner in which the Philippine question is being handled in Washington, President Quezon radioed all the way from the American Capital to Manila a defense of his new Philippine independence plan, succeeding dramatically in his main purpose but drawing new comments on his strategy.

The Administration's plan of placing the Philippine question in the hands of American and Filipino experts who will submit their findings and recommendations for the use of a American-Philippine conference which will then be expected to offer a final plan to Congress, has brought forth warm praise here.

"The Philippine question," says a Herald editorial, "has been retrieved from political incompetence and economic greed, and placed, so to say in the test tube of a scientific laboratory . . . The Roosevelt Administration's Philippine independence will, in all likelihood, be a test-tube baby, in which case it is practically certain that it will be heir to nothing politically or economically illicit."

Meanwhile, President Quezon's explanation has silenced all Philippine opposition. When his plan was first brought to Manila by the press services, it simply consisted of independence in 1938 or 1939. When he himself outlined it over the radio, he stated that independence in 1938 or 1939 will be contingent on a reciprocal trade treaty with America, to last for 10 or 15 years, and embodying the economic provisions of the present independence law.

Business Men Opposed Proposal At Announcement.

WHEN THE Quezon plan was first announced, business elements in the Philippines were sullenly silent in opposition to it. Only two persons, one a big sugar producer, and the other a member of the committee of Philippine experts studying Philippine-American liquidation, openly came out against the plan. As thus voiced, the opposition was based exclusively on the lack of economic provisions. His critics believed that President Quezon had merely reverted to his old cry of "immediate, complete, and absolute independence."

His own explanation that a commercial treaty would be part and parcel of earlier independence placed his plan beyond criticism. There should indeed be no objection to independence at the earliest possible time, provided the economic status quo will last from 10 to 15 years more. Quezon's point is that under a simple legislative act like the independence law, the Philippines will continue to live in pernicious uncertainty as Congress will always feel free to alter the law. Under a bilateral treaty, however, American-Philippine trade relations would be governed by the highest form of contract between nations."

The more analytical asked two further questions. Will the plan be acceptable to the Washington Administration? If a reciprocal commercial treaty cannot be obtained, what then? To the first question, President Quezon had a ready answer. "I am hopeful," he said, "that such a proposal will meet with no very serious objection on the part of the Government of the United States. Moreover, I feel it will not be impossible to secure a special trade relation between America and the Philippines after the three-year period has elapsed." To the second question, he had a traditional reply. "But do not forget," he announced, "that I am prepared, if necessary to get independence for the Philippines even if I should fail to secure for our products the benefits of the market of the United States."

Views Of Quezon May Dominate Experts.

AT A FAREWELL party in honor of two members of the Philippine Assembly, Manuel Roxas, former speaker, and Jose Romero, floor leader, who were leaving to join the committee of experts in Washington, a group of Americans and Filipinos, discussing the latest developments in American-Philippine relations, brought up a new angle of the situation.

"President Roosevelt," one of those in the group, a ranking member of the Assembly, said, "has taken away the Philippine question from the hands of the politicians and beyond the reach of the pressure groups, and is asking the best experts America and the Philippines have to study Philippine independence scientifically. Conclusions and recommendations are to be made only as the findings warrant. Yet President Quezon, by announcing his plan, seems to have advanced his own conclusion already. And in appointing to the joint American-Philippine committee of experts men who are in politics and who cannot be expected to disregard his plan, he has probably disregarded the scientific set-up."

The speaker was referring to the following Filipino members of the committee: Jose Yulo, secretary of justice; Quintin Paredes, resident commissioner in Congress; Jose Romero, floor leader of the Assembly; Manuel Roxas, former speaker and now minority floor leader of the Assembly, and Conrado Benitez, dean of commerce in the state university. It can be said, of course, that all of these men owe their appointments to President Quezon or acknowledge him as their party leader.

Politicians Seen Necessarily Biased.

"BUT THEY are supposed to rise above politics," interposed a listener.

"But will they?" asked a well-known legislator. "When a politician rises above politics, it is time for him to quit politics."

The conclusion was that the Filipinos in the joint committee which Undersecretary of State Sayre will supervise will be bound to support the Quezon plan. In fact, speculative stories in the Manila press have already said as much; the Philippine delegation to the joint committee is expected to find for and recommend independence in 1938 or 1939, together with a reciprocal commercial treaty embodying the economic provisions of the present independence law and lasting for 10 or 15 years.

"Quezon," a loyal party man pointed out, "has been studying, pondering upon, talking and sleeping with Philippine independence during the last 30 years. He needs no experts to form conclusions for him. He justly feels as nearly omniscient on the Philippine question as was William Howard Taft, first civil governor of the islands, during his terms as Secretary of War and President of the United States."

Inquiry Begun Into Greenbelt Labor Charges

RA Studies Claim D. C. Unions Had Preference on Project.

The Resettlement Administration yesterday began an investigation of complaints that preference was being shown to members of Washington labor unions employed at its low-cost housing project, Greenbelt, Md.

The investigation was begun by Mercer G. Evans, director of the Administration's Labor Relations Division, after nonunion workers charged both they and members of the Maryland locals had been discriminated against during the lay-offs at the project in the last several months.

A spokesman for the workers declared an appeal would be made to the National Labor Relations Board.

The complaints were first laid before Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland. While offering his cooperation, Senator Tydings declared the matter should be taken up with the Labor Relations Board.

Meanwhile, the complainants are understood to be planning to back up their complaints with specific charges. Included among these charges is that a certain Washington labor union is forcing employes at Greenbelt to join their organization under the threat of the loss of their jobs.

Almost 2,000 employes have been released at the housing project since last December. At present, according to Resettlement officials, about 3,000 workers are employed. Of these 1,000 will be laid off in the next several weeks due to a "drop in production," Wallace Richards, project co-ordinator, said yesterday.

He added that completion of the project is expected about August 1 of this year. Original plans called for its completion about last February 1. Later, it was announced the work would be finished about July 1.

Channel Project Asked.

Crisfield, Md., April 22 (AP).—Watermen living on both the mainland and Smith Island appeared before Army engineers to ask the improvement of the channel leading from this port to the island.

New Service to Cut Air Time to Coast

Through airplane service between Washington and Los Angeles in 13½ hours will be started April 25 by American Airlines, H. D. Ford, district sales manager, announced yesterday.

The new schedule, using the Southerner, a 14-passenger sleeper plane, cuts 3 hours and 5 minutes from the former flying time. The plane leaves Washington at 10:12 p. m., arriving at Los Angeles at 11:39 a. m., with intermediate stops at Memphis, Fort Worth, El Paso and Phoenix.

Britain Hopes For Parley on U. S. War Debts

Willing to Discuss Issue; Joins Move for Trade Conference.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 22.—Great Britain joined today the lengthening list of European nations who would like a world conference to adjust economic barriers to trade—if somebody else would take the first step.

The government indicated, too, its hope to discuss World War debts with the United States but debate in Commons produced only a reiteration of the familiar British stand—willingness to pay when the time is ripe.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin told Commons the government was ready to enter a world "mutual understanding" conference such as Reichsfuehrer Hitler suggested this week that President Roosevelt might call.

Wait for a Leader.

Britain would enter, however, only if prior investigation showed the conference was likely to succeed and only if there were sufficient advance preparation.

Baldwin thus placed Britain alongside France, Italy, Austria, Russia, Belgium, Germany and the Scandinavian countries, all of which declare they will enter such a conference but none of which apparently wants to take the lead.

Prime Minister Paul Van Zeeland, who will see President Roosevelt in June, is seeking—at the behest of England and France—a solution to world trade barriers which are regarded as obstacles to lasting peace and disarmament.

Roosevelt Mentioned.

Mr. Roosevelt has been mentioned of late as one to take the lead, but the President, the same as the others, is seen here as unwilling to permit Europe to unload its burdens on his shoulders until at least a solid foundation has been set for the success of such a conference.

On the war debts issued, Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, refused to be drawn into lengthy discussion.

"As stated in the note addressed to the United States on December 10, 1936," Chamberlain said, "his majesty's government would be ready to reopen discussions on the question of settlement of the British war debt whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a satisfactory result might be reached."

A. V. Alexander, Laborite and former first lord of the admiralty, had attacked Chamberlain's lack of provision for solving the war debts question.

D. C. Judge Spikes N. J. Project Suit.

A Public Works Administration "loan and grant" to Bayonne, N. J., was tacitly approved by District Court Judge Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday with the statement that discretionary acts of high Federal officials were not subject to judicial intervention unless the acts complained of were "arbitrary of capricious."

The money is to be used in building a $4,000,000 off-shore, ship-to-rail project.

Property owners sued, saying they would be damaged by the project. The Government answer held the property owners had no standing in court and that, were the project halted, the United States would sustain $200,000 loss.

Spanish Institute to Meet.

The Washington Chapter of the Instituto de las Espanas will meet tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Hall of Heroes of the Pan American Union, in celebration of the "Dia de la Lengua" The speaker will be Dr. Max Henriquez Urena, minister of the Dominican Republic to London. His subject will be "La America Espanola vista por Joseph Conrad."

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937.

I had one uncle that suffered in silence for years—that's my Uncle Squincey. As time went on, his face began to take on a haunted, drawn look. But his wife and the home folks didn't notice it because they were so close to him, but when I went home on a visit one time, I could notice the change.

I asked him what the trouble was and he said "I have done everything I could to make my married life work out, but if my wife don't change her attitude pretty soon, I'm afraid I'm done for." I says, "Well, what in the world is the matter at home?" and he says, "Well, when I go out, she stays home and plays the injured wife and when I stay home, she plays the piano."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The Government is preparing for the printing of some interesting material—money . . . The Secretary of the Treasury has invited proposals for the furnishing of distinctive paper for the printing of currency and public debt securities during 1938 . . . The estimated quantity required for currency is 84,165,000 sheets, or about 1,016 tons of paper . . . As yet, no estimate has been made of the requirements for public debt securities . . . Bids will be opened at the Treasury Department on May 16.

Regarding Civil Service, Robert Catherwood, former president, National Civil Service Reform League, says: "As long as the spoils system exists, any President might be subject to political pressure difficult to resist . . . Most of the Presidents and many of the leading statesmen have indorsed the merit system and taken a shot at patronage . . . Yet, since January, 1937, the Congress, regardless of the Brownlow report submitted by the President, has adopted bills exempting positions from the Civil Service rules . . . It is an old and depressing story of good intentions 'gone,'"

The Internal Revenue News Letter reports that 13 employes were separated from the Internal Revenue Service during the past month . . . The charges included improper overtures made to taxpayers, gross negligence of duty and violation of the regulations pertaining to political activity . . . Administrative action of a less severe nature was taken against others in cases which did not warrant separation . . . (The disciplinary action applied to the entire Internal Revenue Service; not to any one unit) . . . Of a more cheerful nature from the same source: The annual spring dance for the benefit of the welfare fund of Revenue Post, No. 39, American Legion, will be held at the Broadmoor Hotel on Friday evening, May 7 . . . "Those absenting themselves from the dance will be the losers," says an announcement . . . The Civil Service Commission announces examinations, as follows: Associate physicist (electroencephalography,) $3,200 a year, United States Public Health Service; endocrinologist, $3,800 a year, Bureau of Dairy Industry.

But, with life as complicated as it is these days, who on earth ever wanted to drag out that word "electroencephalography?" . . . In all conscience, it was difficult enough to copy it from the Civil Service announcement . . . It must be frightful to work with every day; must easily be worth the $3,200 the Government offers to pay for it.

P. V. Cardon, of Agriculture, leaves next month for England to attend an international conference on grass development . . . He has prepared a lengthy and technical paper for presentation . . . Samuel Gompers, Labor Department chief clerk, today observes the fiftieth anniversary of his service with the Government . . . And while fellow-officials congratulated him on his golden anniversary, some debated on whether or not his term of service was the longest in the department . . . Gompers couldn't say, just off-hand. . . .

And on the subject of anniversaries, some may know, though few recall of it, that the Department of Agriculture was born 75 years ago, in May . . . Milton S. Eisenhower, director of information for the department, will outline some of the achievements, ambitions and problems of the department in an early issue of the Extension Service Review . . . Agriculture's new guide book calls attention to the fact that the Weather Bureau cannot handle more than 20 visitors at one time . . .

The orchestra of the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, will give a concert in the Commerce Department Auditorium on Wednesday evennig . . . The program will begin at 8:30 o'clock and will offer the Men's Glee Club of Wilson Teachers College . . . Claude Willis will direct the Glee Club and Leo D. Wiemer, the orchestra.

A special sheet of postage stamps will be issued in connection with the forthcoming convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans, to be held at Asheville, N. C., from August 26 to 28, Postmaster General Farley announces . . . The denomination and subject matter of the special sheets have not been determined . . . The F. C. A. announces, new appointments in the examination division of the Washington office, as follows: Martha Sue Harris, Springfield, Mo.; John T. Glynn, Brooklyn, and Solomon Z. Silver, New York City, have been transferred from field to central office.

The social committee of the Farm Credit Club invites all F. C. employes to meet thir friends in the grand ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel from 9:30 to 12:30 o'clock tomorrow night . . . The occasion is the club's annual spring dance . . . The F. C. A. parking space in rear of the building will be held for dance guests until 9:30 p. m. . . . The Louisiana State Society reception and dance will be held Monday evening in the rose room of the Washington Hotel . . . The affair begins at 9:30 o'clock.

D. C. Colleges' Anti-Fascism Strikes Flop

Leaders Here Heckled; 'Red Literature' Distributed.

Their protest was part of a Nationwide demonstration against war, in which 1,000,000 students participated, according to estimates given the Associated Press by Joseph P. Lash, vice president of the United Student Peace Committee.

As Lash was issuing a statement expressing satisfaction with the mass project, representatives of another organization demanded a Federal investigation of "the forces behind the strike."

Catholics Hit Strike.

The second group was the National Catholic Alumni Federation, which in a statement to the Associated Press in New York declared the peace demonstration to be "a part of a well-organized, well-financed and well-directed plan forcibly to cause dissension, strife and even bloodshed in America."

The federation, which claims to represent 300,000 Catholic college graduates, characterized the strike as an "attempt by subversive elements to prostitute the American love for peace to the use of a foreign, atheistical, destructive ideology—Marxism."

Except for Lash's estimates, it was not known last night how many students took part in the demonstrations.

At both local institutions, the demonstrators against war and Fascism appeared in far less numbers than had been predicted. Exactly 68 students took part in the protest meeting at George Washington, where President Cloyd Heck Marvin had banned any mass assembly on the university campus. At Howard, where the strike was supported by members of the teachers' union, between 300 and 400 students gathered to hear Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, who voted a lone "nay" against the neutrality bill on his first day in the House.

The meeting of the G. W. students in Union Methodist Church was marked by a mysterious distributon of "real Red literature" and by determined heckling of Student Leftist Party Leader William Goodykoontz by a small group of anti-strikers which included some of the football squad.

"Nuts, Goodykoontz."

"Nuts to you Goodykoontz," they shouted. "We want war!"

Representative Henry G. Teigan (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, asserted war was "not at least improbable, right now."

Representative John M. Coffee, of Washington, declared the way to stop war is to stop the sale of munitions and eliminate war-profits.

In evidence on both campuses were banners and placards proclaiming: "Books, Not Guns," "Scholarships, Not Battleships," "Pass the Nye-Kvale Bill," "Crush Fascist Embryos in the United States" and others.

The Associated Press reported that between 10,000 and 15,000 college students took part in several anti-war demonstrations in New York City. Several thousand were reported attending rallies in Chicago.

In Boston, the Associated Press said, several hundred Harvard and Radcliffe students gathered to cheer Prof. Frederic L. Schumann, of Williams College, as he attacked fascism.

The group adopted a resolution condemning his "undemocratic and reactionary policies" and scoring him for abrogating "the fundamental principles of academic freedom."

Howard Ennis, new editor of the University Hatchet, student publication, forgot his hatred of war for long enough to tell the crowd in the Union Methodist Church that his paper from now on would oppose Marvin's stand.

Representative Bernard also spoke at the evening rally.

Unselfish Statesmen Needed, Bowman Says

The supreme need of our National life at present is efficient and unselfish statesmanship and an enlightened, citizenry, President Paul H. Bowman, of Bridgewater College, Va., asserted yesterday in an address to about 100 alumni in the social hall of the First Church of the Brethren.

"The more I see of human institutions and enterprises," said Dr. Bowman, "the more I believe in the importance of men of genuine greatness in human society."

Two D. C. Bills Voted bySenate Unanimously

Infant Blindness Measure Goes to President; West Point Act Approved.

Bills providing for prevention of blindness in infants and increasing the District's quota of appointments to the United States Military Academy at West Point passed the Senate yesterday unanimously.

The measure, which empowers the District health officer to require that prophylactics be administered newborn infants, had passed the House, and now goes to the President. Iits sponsors say it will reduce infant blindness in Washington.

It has been recommended by District officials for several years, and in 1935 passed the Senate, but with an amendment exempting faith healers from a provision relating to treatment of inflammation of the eyes.

Amendment Removed.

This amendment was stricken out both by the House and Senate District Committees this year.

Physicians, midwives or other persons in attendance at childbirths are required to administer the eye treatment immediately upon delivery.

Whenever the attendant finds the child has an inflammation of the eyes, accompanied by a discharge, he is required to report this fact to the health officer.

A penalty of a fine of not more than $100 or not more than 30 days' imprisonment, is provided.

D. C. Quota Raised.

The West Point bill, reported by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, raises the quota of District appointments from five to nine.

While the legislation does not so state, the assumption is that the four additional appointments will be spread over four years, according to the committee report. All will be made upon recommendation of the District Commissioners.

A similar measure relating to District appointments to the Naval Academy is on the Senate calendar, but was passed over yesterday while Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, was out of the chamber.

Halving Taxicabs In District Urged By P. U. C. Aide

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, yesterday recommended Washington taxicabs be reduced to 2,500. Approximately 5,000 cabs are on the streets.

The reduction, he said, would ease traffic congestion and help the business of the remaining drivers.

Keech's statement came when he was asked his opinion on the taxicab bill recently approved by the Commissioners and the Budget Bureau.

The bill would limit the number of cabs by placing in the P. U. C. powers to refuse reissuance of a permit to any driver who had voluntarily retired from the taxicab business or who had been deprived of his permit for violation of traffic regulations.

McMahon Upholds Father's Right to Chastise His Son

He dismissed assault charges against Robert E. Storm, 50, District engineer, accused of "beating" his 11-year-old son with a length of lath.

"I find no evidence to show the defendant was cruel to his son," said Judge McMahon.

The boy, Fred, a sixth-grade student at Cook School, testified his father struck him "25 or 30 times" and left black and blue marks on his arms and body. The charges were made by Storm's divorced wife, now Mrs. Margaret Hoffman, 1428 R street northwest.

Family Social Service Agency Called Conduit

Occupies Place Between Relief and Job, Taft Tells Workers.

Family social service agencies are "the conduits between relief and a job," Charles P. Taft 2d told a luncheon meeting of the Family Service Association at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

"In all its work with families, the private social service agency has one main objective," he said. "Methods may vary in the light of different problems, but the one purpose to which all case-work service is dedicated is to assist the family toward independence, self-support and self-respect."

The son of the late Chief Justice Taft, who has long been prominent in Y. M. C. A. activities in Cincinnati, said that the Government cannot solve "this problem of rehabilitation" singlehanded. He cited the recent flood caused by the Ohio River, and said "if we did not have that splendid staff of Community Chest workers to meet the emergency, God knows where we'd be."

Aid of Congress Is Asked in Fight On Tuberculosis

Unanimous approval of two resolutions calling for action by Congress and the PWA in the fight to check the high tuberculosis death rate in the District was voted yesterday by the board of directors of the District Tuberculosis Association. The resolutions were presented by Dr. James G. Townsend, president of the association.

The first resolution urged Congress to provide for operation of the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale at its full capacity of 300 beds.

Calling for favorable consideration for the construction of a tuberculosis hospital unit for colored patients in connection with the Freedmen's Hospital, the second resolution was a plea to the PWA.

Dinner Given Here By Iowa U. Alumni

The 90-year history of the University of Iowa formed the theme of an address delivered to the Iowa Aumni Association by Dr. Willard Lampe, director of the school of religion, last night.

Dr. Lampe spoke at a dinner of the group in the Harrington Hotel. He described its progress and development as he has seen it through the years.

Toastmaster was Earl Hoffman, and there was a special exhibition of motion pictures of the campus and the college life, presented by Dr. Bruce Mahan and Dr. Frank Phillips. About 38 men and women attended the affair.

D. C. Jews Decry Seizures by Nazi

Leaders of the Washington B'nai B'rith expressed dismay yesterday over the reported dissolution of the fraternal organization in Germany and the arrest of 1,000 or more members.

David Wiener, secretary of the local Argo Lodge, said: "The B'nai B'rith is not a secret organization, either here or in Germany, and when it is realized that the German B'nai B'rith has administered the principal Jewish charities, including homes for the aged, orphanages and convalescent homes, the seriousness of the new crisis may be realized. It will mean that American Jews must give more liberally to help their brethren overseas."

2 Lawmakers Subpenaed in Blackmail Case

Cited as Recommenders of Mrs. Krieger, One of Defendants.

Senator Elmer Thomas aand Representative Wilbur Cartwright, of Oklahoma, yesterday were subpenaed as character witnesses for Mrs. Mary Krieger, former Oklahoma school teacher, on trial here on blackmail charges. Both were summoned to appear today at the trial in District Court.

Both lawmakers have been mentioned in defense testimony of Mrs. Krieger and Samuel L. Frooks, also charged with blackmail, as authors of letters of recommendation for Mrs. Krieger.

The defendants are alleged to have attempted to blackmail Carroll Pierce, Alexandria banker, who died recently.

Rosemary Krieger, 16-year-old daughter of the defendant, took the stand and said she told police she knew Frooks and did not like him at first, but had changed her mind about him.

When Frooks took the stand he said a number of papers had disappeared from his brief case after his arrest in a downtown hotel last September.

He asserted he acted in the case only as an attorney should act for a client who has a claim for a breach of contract, explaining Mrs. Krieger came to him with a claim against Pierce in connection with the banker's alleged failure to carry out an agreement to give her employment.

Court PlanSupport Is Urged by Farley

Boston, April 22 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley tonight declared "The purely economic views of a meager few must not be permitted to defeat the reforms on which the life of democracy depends."

The chairman of the Democratic National Committee urged support for President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization proposal in an address before the Alumni Association of the Boston University Law School.

"Throughout the European world, democracy is giving way before the mailed fist of might," said Farley, "and always the justification is that some part of the machinery of democracy has failed to function as the demands of the time required. And we don't want any part of the machinery of our institutions to make humane progress impossible in the land of Jefferson."

Catholic U. Singers In Spring Program

The annual spring concert of the Catholic University Glee Club will take place tonight at 8:15 in McHahon Hall, on the campus.

Led by Dr. Leo Behrendt, about 30 members of the club will join in a number of classical and popular numbers, including the Scottish folk song, "Loch Lomond," Kountz' "Cossack Love Song" and Beethoven's "In Questa Tomba." The program will feature several violin selections by Milton Schwartz.

Conrad Bernier, Washington composer and pianist, will accompany the glee club.

12,000 Idle In District, Says Lamson

Relief Picture Changed as Estimate of 3,000 Is Increased.

Number Does Not Include Those on WPA; Few Are Transients.

Washington's relief picture changed suddenly yesterday when C. E. Lamson, director of the District of Columbia Employment Center, revealed there are at least 12,000 unemployed men and women in the District, whose need may soon become real.

It had been previously believed and announced there were only 3,000.

Furthermore, pointing to the 11,000 persons now on WPA, Lamson declared there is a District total of 23,000 now seeking employment in private business.

This development in the relief situation, coming as the result of a survey just completed by the employment center, follows the Board of Trade's recent opposition to a larger relief appropriation for the District.

These 12,000 unemployed, said Lamson, are not transients. At least 80 per cent of them have lived in the District for 6 months; at least 70 per cent, for one year.

Workers Are Listed.

Comprising both skilled and unskilled labor the group is divided as follows:

There are 593 white hotel and restaurant workers; a total of 6,262 building trade workers, of which 3,027 are white; a total of 3,149 commercial workers, of which 2,641 are white; a total of 372 white maids and institutional workers, and 1,880 colored domestics.

The Employment Center has included in its total only those men and women who have registered within the last 60 days.

The 3,000 unemployed employables, Lamson said, instead of being the District total, are probably only that part of the total in the direst need.

Commenting on Lamson's statement, William H. Savin, of the Family Service, declared "it is unfortunate the public has been led to believe there are only 3,000 unemployed in the District."

In a statement sent to the Commissioners Wednesday, the Washington Board of Trade viewing "with concern the rise in the cost of relief in the District," declared it could not "approve the request that an additional $1,000,000 for 1938 be appropriated."

Explaining the Board of Trade made a preliminary survey to determine "the correct picture of relief and unemployment conditions," Edgar Morris, president of the board, in a statement issued yesterday, said in part:

"Until this time we have received no facts and no information which discredits the general findings of our preliminary survey. We confidently expect that the investigation which is now going on will serve to clarify conditions greatly, but it is possible that very strong data will be developed to show the need for a continuation of relief in a great many quarters. We believe, however, that the general conclusions of our preliminary survey are unshakable."

Dr. Stokes Pleased.

Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington Cathedral and chairman of the Citizens Committee on Unemployment, after hearing the Morris statement said:

"I am glad to see that the Board of Trade has corrected the impression conveyed by recent publication of action taken some time ago on the relief situation.

"President Morris' statement to the press today that 'our minds are definitely not closed' on this important matter is very reassuring.

"The board is now co-operating with the citizens' committee on unemployment and other groups in preparing a report of the exact facts so as 'to arrive at a complete unbiased picture of the whole problem.'

"The Board of Trade represents a substantial group of good citizens and we are very hopeful that when the present study of the facts is completed and the seriousness of the problem is fully realized, it will find the Board of Trade and the citizens' committee on unemployment standing shoulder to shoulder in their demand before Congress for additional relief for needy employables who cannot find jobs."

Bandit Takes $60 From Liquor Store In Hurried Holdup

In a holdup executed so rapidly that he overlooked $20 in additional loot, a lone robber took $60 and some change from the Washington Wine and Liquor Co., 1211 Pennsylvania avenue.

Brandishing a revolver, the robber forced William Sherwood, 26, of 322 Jefferson place, store employe, and Charles Mullens, 29, of 825 Crittenden street, employed in the Washington garage, next door, to lie on the floor.

The robber then took the money and dashed out the front door. It was Mullen who possessed the additional $20. It was part of the garage's daily receipts.

Hospital Appeal Heard on Radio

Four prominent citizens of the District were heard in a broadcast last night in an appeal for the nine voluntary hospitals for funds to aid them in continuing their work for needy citizens.

Dr. William Gerry Morgan, local physician; Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University; Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, and James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, spoke.

They were introduced by Ross Garrett, director of the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals.

Owner Reclaims 'Flaming Mamie'

The 300-pound statue of a staid matron which was deposited in Lafayette Square Tuesday night while park policemen were not looking, was reclaimed yesterday by its owner.

C. Marshall Finnan, parks superintendent, announced Miss Julia Eckel had asked him if she couldn't get her plaster mascot back, explaining that it was removed from her studio at 1517 H street northwest by playful art students. "Flaming Mamie" had been placed in storage in the Potomac Park warehouse.

He consented.

Armed Pair Robs D. C. Store Owner

Grayer Williams, 1709 Second street northwest, owner of a liquor store at 1235 U street northwest, was robbed of his day's receipts early yesterday by two armed colored men.

Williams told police he had locked up his store and was entering his automobile in front when the bandits approached and threatened him with a revolver.

They took $148 in bills and change and then forced him to drive through the Soldiers' Home grounds, where they forced him out. They escaped in Williams' car.

Hazen Begins Study of 'Lax' Prosecutions

Asks Report on Reputed Traffic Court Cases of Favoritism.

Board of Trade Assails Action in Recent Auto Death Case.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

An investigation of reported laxity in the prosecution of Police Court traffic cases was started yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, it was learned last night.

Although details of the inquiry were withheld, it was understood that Commissioner Hazen has called for "a complete report" on recent instances of reputed "favoritism and negligence" within the assistant corporation counsel's office at Police Court.

"I am not prepared to say what action will be taken," Commissioner Hazen said. He indicated, however, that records of several cases would be studied and "a few questions would be asked."

The Board of Trade traffic committee yesterday scored the release of a woman motorist after police had charged her with reckless driving.

The car she allegedly was driving struck the rear end of a street car and a passenger in the auto later died of injuries. An assistant corporation counsel, it was pointed out, refused to prosecute the woman and she was permitted to leave this jurisdiction.

Subsequently, a coroner's jury ordered the woman held on manslaughter charges, but police were unable to locate her.

Col. L. C. Crawford, chairman of the board committee, urged closer co-ordination of all District traffic departments and suggested a "director of safety" be appointed to act as liaison between enforcement and judicial branches.

The investigation, it was further learned, is expected to cover alleged cases where court papers have been refused against certain so-called "influential" persons.

An increased traffic police force and re-establishment of night traffic court, as now provided for by law, was also urged by the committee.

Crushed by Truck.

Harry Fieldson, 32, 1010 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was in a serious condition last night at Providence Hospital with injuries sustained when he was crushed between two trucks.

Police said Fieldson was cranking a truck belonging to the Columbia Foundation, of which he is an employe, when another truck, parked just above him on the slope of South Capitol street, north of D street, rolled into him.

The truck in front of Fieldson was being cranked by Alfred Trainham, of Alexandria, also an employe of the foundation.

Injured while playing in the street, Joseph Lewis, 4, of 325 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, last night was admitted to Providence Hospital, suffering from a fractured skull. He was struck by a car reportedly driven by Gus R. Day, 26, as he darted across Third street southeast, between Pennsylvania avenue and C street.

Added Revenue Source Vital to D. C., Says Seal

Coropration Counsel Elwood Seal told members of the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday that "the most drastic reductions" in cost of District government could not cut expenses more than $50,000, and that the Commissioners must have some additional revenue source available by July 1.

Seal warned that if methods to gain an additional $6,146,000 revenue are not found the Commissioners will be forced to increase the levy on real estate.

Gable to Testify For His Accuser In Fraud Trial

Actor to Be Witness for Both Sides; Woman's Love Letter Read.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, April 22.—The defense of Mrs. Violet Norton—buxom Englishwoman who claims Clark Gable is the father of her 13-year-old daughter—opened today with the handsome movie hero ready to testify in her behalf.

Gable, who testified for the prosecution and then was summoned as a defense witness, remained in the prosecutor's office, while Government attorneys placed into the record of Mrs. Norton's mail fraud trial a letter which offered the actor her "heart and mind."

"You have had my body," it said.

It was the letter which formed the basis of the Government's case against the 47-year-old woman, accused of demanding money from Gable on the ground he is the father of her daughter Gwendoline.

The letter called him "Frank." "Frank Billings," the defendant said, was the man whose mistress she was in England in 1922 and 1923. Many years later she saw Gable on the screen and believed she had found her missing lover, she said.

Gable has testified he never was in England and has never been a father.

Mrs. Norton begged that "Frank" love her again.

"You and I understand each other," she wrote. "We could have a swell time. Nobody in the world would ever know. I would sooner make love to you than harm you, but I get desperate."

Another letter concerned Gwendoline—how closely she resembled Gable, in looks and actions, how much she adored Gable on the screen, how badly she needed his aid, financial and moral. It asked that Gable place Gwendoline in a school and rear her to be a great actress.

Smith, a private investigator, declared he never saw Mrs. Norton until he came to court in the present trial. He denied he entered into any scheme with her to defraud Gable.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Washington String Quartet (Milton Schwartz, Paul Brightenburg, George Wargo and Howard Mitchell) in the Sulgrave Club Thursday afternoon. Program: Quartet in A minor (John Alden Carpenter), Quartet in D minor (Schubert).

With this program the Washington String Quartet brought its seasonal series of four concerts to a pleasant close. So consistent are these young musicians in their interpretations and so nicely balanced is their technical proficiency that one derives from their playing the satisfaction of admirably proportioned performance. They have both zeal and idealism, and the combination has brought them far along the arduous road of ensemble work. They have accomplished much in the last few years, and the quality of their achievement is rich in promise.

John Alden Carpenter's quartet in A minor, less frequently heard than it should be, is Franco-American in its flavor. With an unmistakable idiom of his own, somewhat brusque and impolitic, Carpenter combines a Gallic tartness and wit. One feels in his music an affiliation with the sarcasm of Ravel and the delicate irony of Debussy, yet neither of these composers have directly affected his harmonic texture. It is a case of intellectual sympathy which has spanned the distance between Chicago and Paris.

The posthumously published D minor quartet of Schubert enshrines in its second movement one of the loveliest of his songs, "Der Tod und das Maedchen." That haunting melody, and the variations woven about it, suffuse the entire work with a nostalgia for the surcease of mortal struggle. The liveliness of the other movements does not dissimulate the undercurrent of melancholy. A lyric poet in tone, Schubert knew the poet's isolation in the midst of gayety, and his laughter is more often than not the obverse of sadness.

D. C. Chapter American Guild of Organists presents Allan Bacon in recital Thursday evening in the Church of the Epiphany. Program of 18 pieces by Bach, Handel, Franck, Reger, Vierne, Wood, Barnes, Skryabin, Dupre, Clokey, Ravel and Bacon.

Possibly because it is the king of instruments, the organ does not in these democratic days receive the homage that it once did, and only a virtuoso organist with an illustrious name can draw a throng to a recital. Although Allan Bacon is not without honor in California, where he has presided at the College of the Pacific for more than a decade, and has the esteem of colleagues who know his worth, the small audience that greeted him last evening represented the loyal subjects of the organ and not those curious about a fame.

The ostentation of the virtuoso is not a quality to which Mr. Bacon would lay claim. For one reason, he is obviously concerned with the essential values of the music that he plays and not with its popular appeal; for another, his capable technique is applied to interpretation and not to superficial display.

His cosmopolitan program contained such unexpected items as two of Skryabin's mystical piano preludes transcribed for registrations that would have pleased the composer, the "Petite Pastorale" of Ravel, and two humorous descriptive pieces by Joseph Clokey. Each was represented by three chorale settings, Handel by an aria from the tenth organ concerto, Franck by the "Piece Heroique," and the versatilely voluminous Max Reger by a canon and a toccata.

His technical resources were well shown in the prelude and finale from Vierne's first symphony, Marcel Dupre's "Ave Maris Stella," and the "Toccata on a Gregorian Theme," by Barnes. One regrets that he modestly placed but one of his own compositions on the program, for the "Toccata in Modern Style" is interesting both in structure and in ideas.

This Is the Fellow Who Couldn't!

In "Internes Can't Take Money," foremost screen feature at the Earle this week, the principal male role is played by Joel McCrea. His costar in the picture is Barbara Stanwyck. There is, of course, a long and honorable cast in support. Stage bill added, as usual.

Gypsy Rose Lee Fails to Click On the Screen

That Is to Say, the Major Teaser of Burley Stage Must Behave in Films.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 22.—The pink epidermis of strip-teaser Gypsy Rose Lee, admired by New Yorkers from Fourteenth street to Park avenue, will remain in total eclipse for movie audiences.

Debuting in "You Can't Have Everything," the former Burleycue queen, who fillipped Broadway by tossing her scanties into the $6.60 seats, will toss off nothing but a couple of songs and dances.

Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Foxer No. 1, reached the decision after a conference with his ways and means committee, and to prove he isn't fooling, the large young woman spent her first day on the lot backing in and out of 17 costumes she'll wear in the picture.

Nearest moviegoers will get to the essentials of the Lee figure will be in a couple of sequences in which she wears a long, tight-fitting gown a la Mae West, and if you've seen West it's hardly worth while ogling Lee.

Seems the moviemen can't have everything, either.

Simone Simon, French with the perpetual pout, draws largest play from college boys and sailors, and is currently receiving an average of ten bids a day to junior proms and senior hops on campi from Stanford to Columbia.

Mother of Three Gives Up in Fatal Shooting of Rival

Moultrie, Ga., April 22 (AP).—Jessie Mae Wilkes, pretty 30-year-old garment factory worker, indicted April 5 on a charge of slandering Mrs. Coy A. Stephenson, was shot to death on a street of this south Georgia city today.

Sherifff T. V. Beard said Mrs. Stephenson, 40, mother of three, surrendered with the sobbed request: "Take me to jail."

Beard said three bullets from a revolver held in a paper bag struck Miss Wilkes. Deputy Sheriff J. H. Phillips said that Mrs. Stephenson and her husband, a special policeman, separated recently and that "jealousy" was involved in a dispute between the women.

A. E. F. Second Reunion Will Be Held Here

Second national reunion of American Expeditionary Forces has been awarded to Washington for this year, Curtis Hodges, executive director of the Greater National Capital Committee, was advised last night by Capt. Hiram R. Williamson, of Dallas, president of the reunion.

The reunion will be held September 16 to 19 and will bring several thousand veterans here. It will precede the national convention of the American Legion which opens in New York September 20.

Prominent former A. E. F. members now living here will be appointed on committees to arrange the event, Capt. Williamson advised Hodges.

Two Taylor Girls To Testify Today

New Castle, Ky., April 22 (AP).—The two pretty young daughters of Verna Garr Taylor will testify tomorrow against Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, who is charged with the murder of their mother.

Commonwealth's Attorney H. B. Kinsolving, jr., said Mary Taylor Brown, 22, and her sister, Frances, 17, would be among the prosecution witnesses who would be placed on the stand tomorrow in an effort to refute the defense's contention that the comely 40-year-old La Grange, Ky., widow took her own life.

Selection of a jury to try the former Adjutant General and Lieutenant Governor occupied today's session.

5 Reserve Officers Here Receive Orders for Duty

Army orders affecting five reserve officers, on duty here in Washington or who live here, were issued Wednesday by the War Department.

Three members of the Quartermaster Corps Reserve have been ordered to active duty on May 3. Maj. William S. Kinney, 5725 Colorado avenue; Maj. Ingwald C. Olsen, 3615 Kanawha street northwest; Maj. Frederick J. Ritter, 5236 Forty-second street northwest. First Lieut. John H. Savage, jr., and First Lieut. Cloyd T. Caldwell, on duty in the office of the chief of finance, are continued on active duty until the middle of November.

Death for Kidnapers.

Denver, April 22 (AP).—The Colorado Legislature sent to Gov. Teller Ammons today a "Lindbergh" law fixing a mandatory death penalty for kidnapers convicted of injuring their victims. Convicted kidnapers who do not harm their victims would be subject to imprisonment from 40 years to life.

Love Ad Brings Arrest.

Cleveland, April 22 (AP).—When Ralph H. Palmer, 25, signified in a newspaper he would be happy to marry any girl who would accompany a $2,500 dowry to pay his debts, his picture attracted Detective Sergeant Emil Smetana's attention and police charged the self-styled poet today with issuing a forged check at a downtown hotel.

Boy Escapes Death By Short Circuit

Three-year-old Elvin Sill, 915 Fourteenth street southeast, narrowly escaped electrocution yesterday when he shoved a curtain rod into the "third rail" of street car tracks at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

Police said the boy was crossing the tracks when he pushed the rod into the slot, causing a short circuit. Flames shot into air, burning Elvin on the legs and arms.

He was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where his wounds were found to be not serious. He was released after treatment.

Fast Day Observed.

Concord, N. H., April 22 (AP).—Business and public agencies were idle throughout New Hampshire today in observance of the State's unique holiday, Fast Day, first proclaimed 256 years ago. When the aged Governor of the province lay dying in 1681, he ordered a day of public fasting and prayer in view of the "sundry tokens of divine displeasure."

Screen Star Is Target-Minded And Proves It

Reginald Denny Invents New Device That Will Interest Aircraft Gunners.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 22.—Reginald Denny's hobby will give Uncle Sam's antiaircraft gunners something to shoot at in tests to be made off San Diego this June.

Actor will launch half a dozen of his 6-foot miniature motor-powered model bombers, while "archie" batteries pound away from the deck of a cruiser trying to shoot the planes down within 20 minutes.

Both Army and Navy ordnance experts will watch the experiment, and, as a result, Denny hopes his model planes will replace permanently the towed "sleeve" targets currently used in anti-aircraft practice.

Denny explained the stunt between scenes on B. P. Schulberg's "Great Gambini" set, where he has an entire motion-picture company playing with model planes.

Eliminate Danger.

"Model plane targets should be a big improvement over unwieldy sleeves," he said. "They'll eliminate danger to human life, permit firing at greater ranges, and simulate actual warfare conditions almost exactly.

"Sleeves have a safety ceiling of 1,500 feet. The 6-foot models, however, will fly at 2,000 to 2,500 feet, and traveling at that altitude at 40 miles an hour will duplicate a regulation bomber flying 180 miles an hour at 7,500 to 10,000 feet.

"There's no reason why they should not be used as effectively in pursuit practice.

"Models will be amphibians, and motors regulated to land on the water after 20 minutes flight unless they are shot down.

"Cost won't be great. I can turn them out in quantity for $45 or $50 apiece. Sleeve targets cost about $40."

No Wedding Bells.

No wedding bells will ring this year for Blonde Marian Marsh and Albert P. Scott, wealthy New York broker and former husband of Colleen Moore.

"I want to make lots and lots of pictures before I marry," she said. "But of course I will eventually. We're engaged, you know, and engagements usually end that way."

But they don't always. Especially in Hollywood.

Director Henry King has gone shopping for a beautiful cow to play Mrs. O'Leary's legendary pet that kicked over a lantern to start the great Chicago fire of 1871. Picture based on the blaze, but dubbed simply "Chicago" will roll May 31.

Specifications for the beast are: Color, well marked Jersey; weight, 1,100 pounds; height, 4 feet 3 inches at the shoulder, 4 feet 2 at the hip; waist, 7 feet; ankles, 8 inches.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Maker of 'San Francisco,' 'The Thin Man,' 'Trader Horn' and a Long List of Other Successes, Proves Himself No Less Gifted as Host to a Long Line of Distinguished Guests; We Deny the Charge of Baby Specialist; Interesting News Notes and Sidelights on the Current State of the Theater.

BELL.

WITH the graying and distinguished Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt as guest of honor, Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovski, Col. Marvin H. McIntyre, of the President's secretariat; Commissioner and Mrs. George Allen, Senator Ashurst, ladies and gentlemen of the press, high officials of the Government without number; Mr. and Mrs. Carter Tate Barron, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Berger, Mr. and Mrs. Lou Brown and countless others to represent the film industry, that was quite a party that Maj. Woody S. Van Dyke threw in the Italian Gardens of the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday night at 8.

Some of us got there just a little late, but that made no difference in the sum total of result of perfect entertainment. Waiters were on every hand. So were ersters, mock turtle zup, arroz con pollo—as we say in the pure Castilian—seafood platters, salads, desserts, boiling pots of hot coffee—praise be—and everything else that goes to make up a perfectly appointed tribute to an honor guest who did something of the sort herself a few years back when "Naughty Marietta" was new and Nelson Eddy was in town along with this amiable Van Dyke fellow.

As a climax to his Mayflower soiree Wednesday night, Van offered another preview screening of his company's production of Kipling's "Captains Courageous," directed by his pal, Victor Fleming.

We have gone into this business of "Captains Courageous" in an earlier column—following the Press Club premiere last Friday night, to be exact. This is a picture that no sane theatergoer would permit himself to miss. It lacks all of the usual elements of mass appeal, to be sure, just as "Mutiny on the Bounty" did, but it packs a punch, to slip into the vernacular, that is irresistible.

Those of us who had seen "Captains Courageous" on its first time out, as we say in the paddock, repaired to the Woody Van Dyke suite on the third floor of the Mayflower and there did complete justice to the bounteous measure of his hospitality. That is why I feel the way I do today!

Yesterday afternoon, one suspects—assuming that the Major was able to move—the prodigious Van Dyke went on to New York to complete the vacation from the Hollywood lots which he began here. From New York, he will probably fly to the West Coast to make the sequel to the sequel of "The Thin Man", in which William Powell and Myrna Loy once more will be the costars.

In the meantime, we wish Woody the best of luck in everything he undertakes. If it takes the form of entertaining, we already know what the answer will be.

Self-defense note: That broadcast on Tom McCarthy's Post hour over WMAL a night or two ago is not to be taken too seriously. I have been paged a flattering number of times since, as a child psychologist with a vast understanding of children. Having been a bachelor since way back when—and if you think I am going to say when, you are practically crazy—I know almost as much about "sparing the rod and spoiling the child" as Tom himself—which is virtually nothing. We both are bachelors. Listen in and learn a lot!

Now that the three-week run of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the Pearl S. Buck novel of "The Good Earth" is about to run its length at the National theater—it will come off this Saturday night—we may contemplate another period, however brief, of the socalled "legitimate" drama.

On Monday night, Jane Cowl will open in a return engagement of "First Lady," one of the most engaging of the contemporary comedies in which all of the frailties and foibles of Washington official life are laid bare with a skill that is incomparable.

Following the Cowl engagement, will come Ruth Draper in a week of her superb—and that is about the only adjective that will do—"character sketches," in which she does much the same sort of thing as Cornelia Otis Skinner brings to the stage, except that Miss Draper got here first.

After that will be the "Follies" and other productions of the first rank to maintain the reputation of this season as one of the most productive that has come along in years to keep the average of the living drama up where it rightfully belongs.

* * * *

These "teaser campaigns" are beginning to get in the hair of this department—what little he has left! I mean, for example, this silly business of sending around guessing games for the drama desks to answer. There is a supposedly expository drawing of a scene from some forthcoming film production and all the editor has to do, from a few brief "leads," is to name the picture. The dickens with it, is what I always say. There have been two of these things on my desk the last couple of days and so what? And so I toss them into the wastebasket. What else to do? A girl sitting on a bench and a large bell, evidently clanging into a capital "A", somehow seem to mean nothing to this typewriter. Maybe later on, I'll get a clue to this cryptic thing. So far, no dice.

Max Terhune, and I assume that your curiosity will be as great as my own was at the preview of "The Hit Parade," opening on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow, may be identified as a member in good standing of the International Brotherhood of Magicains. In addition to being a clever prestidigitator, he also is a ventriloquist of the first rank. If you ever saw him before, you have something on me. I never did.

E. Lawrence Phillips, the old Washington showman, is up and at it again. This time he brings in the Johnny J. Jones' Exposition as a special attraction for ten days out at Eighteenth and H streets northeast. The old lot at Fifteenth and H was found inadequate to the present demands of the expanded carnival show that Larry brings to town.

You will remember Lawrence Phillips as the stentorian announcer out at the ballyard, before the era of publi address systems and loudspeakers. He also is owner and manager of several local motion picture theaters and is recognized by many as the contemporary of Tom Moore and the late Harry M. Crandall in the establishment locally of the cinema as a potent influence in mass entertainment.

Leaders of 'The Hit Parade'

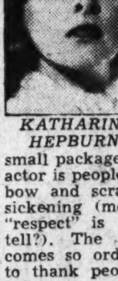
In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, April 22.—Fell out of bed on the wrong side this morning, and the mood is growly. So this is as good a time as any to bark about stars who are quick to resent criticism, slow to acknowledge praise. The habit is common in Hollywood, and it is likewise aggravating.



KATHARINE HEPBURN.

I believe it is due to the fact that praise comes in carload lots, and criticism in small packages. The daily life of an actor is peopled with "yesmen" who bow and scrape until it becomes sickening (most of the time this "respect" is mock, but who can tell?). The point is praise becomes so ordinary that stars soon to thank people for extraordinary favors.

* * * *

Not long ago a certain high-and-mighty actress (well, Katharine Hepburn, if you must know) telephoned to scream about a poke I had taken at her. I interrupt myself here to say that such calls are common in my life, because I often poke at stars—perhaps too often for my own good. But it is such fun. At any rate, Katty raised a private little storm, to which I said:

* * * *

"I have written any number of complimentary things about you, and not once have you been thoughtful enough to say thanks. I don't expect thanks, nevertheless until you have acknowledged the nicer remarks, I don't think you are entitled to the privilege of 'hollering' if you're hurt."

* * * *

I have cited Miss Hepburn simply as one example. Any Hollywood columnist will tell you that he can pen compliments until his inkwell runs dry, and he will get nary a peep of gratitude for his paeans of praise. But let him say this or that star is a high-hatted snob, and he will think all hell has broken loose.

* * * *

Mozell and Alan Dinehart recently installed a swimming pool, and because of the lay-of-the-land of their hillside home, they had to build up tons of dirt around the pool's concrete walls. That accounts for Mozelle's recent telephone call to her insurance agent.

* * * *

She wanted to know if their property was insuranced against the ravages of rain. "Because," she explained, "the heavy rains washed away the dirt and shrubs, and our pool is standing out there on the hillside like a sparrow without feathers."

* * * *

Standing off-stage at Universal the other morning, I was amused by this bit of conversation between a director and Bennie Bartlett, a 10-year-old. "You're going to like this scene, Bennie," the director said, "because you get to spend the whole morning in bed. It'll be just like home." The youngster's freckled face spread itself in a huge grin. "Better than home," he exclaimed, "because I won't have to wash my ears when I get up."

Carrier Hearing Set.

Richmond, Va., April 22 (AP).—A request by the Carter Express Lines for permission to abandon its motor freight service between Richmond and Harrisonburg was set today by the State Corporation Commission for May 22.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, April 22.

SPEECH: Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of Kaiser Wilhelm, who served a mechanic's apprenticeship at the Ford factory in Detroit, was a dinner guest at the home of Fritz Kreisler. He interspersed the polite dinner conversation with most censorable phrases—four-letter words he had learned in the shops . . . Shame on you," he was berated. "After all, your father, the Crown Prince, speaks so well" . . . "Father speaks Oxford English," the Prince explained. "I speak Ford English!"

WEALTH: Noel Coward this week was offered $90,000 to do 13 broadcasts on Sunday evening . . . "I'll take it," Coward agreed, "on condition that I can select the Sundays on which I'm to work." The agent pointed out to the playwright that such an arrangement is impossible in radio . . . "Well," Coward explained, "then it won't work out so well. You see, there's this difficulty: When it's a nice Sunday and I don't feel like working—I just don't work. So my answer is—forget all about it!"

KNOWLEDGE: Prof. Henry Pratt Fairchild, the eminent sociologist, gave his class at N. Y. U. a unique assignment the other afternoon. The problem was: "Why do young girls discontinue their education to become entertainers?" To most of the class this problem had no special significance. But Prof. Fairchild has one daughter, Eleanor, who left college two years ago—to become half of the dance team of Sandino & Fairchild.

SWANK: Monte Proser and Milton Blackstone, the publicists, have just moved into a penthouse apartment. In keeping with his new station, they hired a dusky cook named Frank Montgomery. "Frank," they asked, "can you drive a car?" . . . He stated that he was an excellent chauffer and owned a uniform as well as a car of more elegant make than the one possessed by the press agents . . . Frank, therefore, has become cook-chauffeur for the publicists and drives them in his own car! As compensation for this extra service, they must address him as "Mr. Montgomery," while it is his privilege to address his employers as "Sonny!"

ROMANCE: Selena Royale, who is Mrs. Earle Farimore, went to a studio the other day to be photographed in costume for her new play, "Curtain Call." The costumer, however, had been unable to finish the dress in time to take these pictures. Miss Royale then remembered that her wedding dress, originally her mother's, was almost an exact duplicate of the one she is to wear in the play. She therefore phoned her husband immediately to have him send the gown to the photographer's . . . "Darling," she began, "do you remember my wedding gown?" . . . After a two-minute pause, Mr. Larimore's voice came over te wire. "Of course I do," he said. "It was something fuzzy!"

ENTERPRISE: The German-American Bund, the Nazi organization here, just ordered 10,000 bronze emblems inscribed: "Your Fight Is My Fight" . . . These emblems are being manufactured for them by a John Street firm—of non-Aryans.

YOUTH: When the "Dead End" cast played Washington, the management was forced to start the show at 8 p. m. because of the strict District of Columbia laws applying to the youngsters of the cast . . . Everything went as scheduled the first night, with the curtain down at 10 p. m., as prescribed by law. Ten minutes later those members of the audience who wandered into a grill nearby were amazed to discover a large group of the cast's youngsters seated calmly at the bar—sipping beer!

ESTEEM: Oscar Levant, the pianist-composer, listened to George Gershwin discuss the arts, music and creative work . . . "George," Levant interrupted, "if you had to do it over again—would you fall in love with yourself again?"

DARING: The Great Wollendas, who are with the Ringling Brothers' show, do an amazing stunt, wherein they're swung clean across the arena at Madison Square Garden. It's what Dexter Fellowes describes as "death-defying" . . . Their agent yesterday asked them if they'd play a date at Pittsburgh—a date which would necessitate their taking a plane . . . They turned it down—because they won't travel in planes.

NAME: Constance Cummings, star of "Young Madame Conti," and her husband, Benn Levy, have an unusual cable address. They can be reached by cable addressed to "STENCH, U. S. A."

♣ Q 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

The contract was a sound one, but it should be pointed out that three notrump would have been a more normal contract. South's decision to play for eleven tricks at his solid suit, however, cannot be criticized.

West, fearing that the dummy would be short of some suit, opened a trump to cut down a possible crossruff. South won, and drew three rounds of trumps. He decided that the club suit would furnish enough discards for the hearts and, therefore, continued with the Queen of clubs.

East made a standard hold-up play by letting the Queen of clubs hold. Had he taken the trick, South could have discarded his losing hearts on dummy's clubs.

At this point South made the fatal error of taking another club finesse. This time East won with the King, and returned a heart. Now South no longer had an entry to dummy and his spade lead was taken by West's Ace, after which the defenders cashed two heart tricks.

After winning the Queen of clubs, South should have led the Jack of spades. He would be able to discard one heart on dummy's extra spade, and he could well afford to lose one spade trick and one heart trick.

Arthur Warren And Orchestra Hit at Wardman

By Chanticleer

This fellow Arthur Warren is happiest when he's playing a semiclassic item in the rhythm of the day. The other night when a widely known dancing instructor was in the Wardman's metronome room, Maestro Warren started the bolero, which is one of the orchestra's favorite numbers. So well did the dancing instructor and his partner whirl to the Warren version of the number (it is the Ravel bolero) that other dancers stood to one side, and it became an exhibition of Warren's music and the couple's dancing.

Monday night is becoming tango night at Wardman Park.. In fact, a series of Monday night tango-rhumba series of dance sessions is already under way.

* * * *

It has just occurred to me what the filmy screen around the stage at the Shoreham this week is for. Its a snow-screen! While the ice carnival is on, Barnee directs the orchestra behind this diaphanous affair—a part of the cedar trees and icicles and props in general. The little skating ladies are lovely in lavender gowns with tiny lavender parasols. Later in white pinafores laced at the waist.

The Russian Troika's lovely lady, Helen Hamilton, has come to the conclusion, following a recent trip to Manhattan's nighteries, that a duplicate of the Troika somewhere in New York City would be a very slick idea. But—she wouldn't have the prominent people from diplomatic and politcial life there that she has at her supper club tables here.

* * * *

Rene and Raquel really interpret the dances of Old Mexico, in their turns at the Carlton's El Patio, and in costumes as authentic as Rene's ancestry. Sande Williams is featuring this week the music from "Waikiki Wedding," principally "Sweet Is the Word for You."

The romance of the wide open spaces, notably those fine pine trees with their sweet aroma, apparently gets the patrons of Boulevard Farms, down the Memorial Highway below Alexandria. It is a fact that an average of three wedding parties foregather at the farms weekly.

* * * *

Sally Evans had a real thrill last week when she sang for the first time "on the ry-dee-o." Sally is vocalist with Ray Benson and his orchestra at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. Maestro Benson is the pianist in the band and directs by the subtle business of nodding his head ever so gently to the boys here and there.

Dr. Marcus, the magic gentleman appearing this week at the Mayfair, will positively close his Washington engagement at the end of the week because of previous engagements. No holdovers, in other words. But Jimmy Byrd is bringing back Otis Manning, the "magician moderne," who already has baffled Mayfair patrons.

* * * *

Johnnie, the Call Boy, dropped into the Ambassador's Hi Hat room a night or so ago and made a tremendous hit with the ladies. They'll tell you in the Hi Hat that Johnnie merely proves again that if you stick around awhile you'll realize what they mean there when they say "anything can—and everything does—happen in this room."

Cocoanut Grove offers a brand-new show this week—a new master of ceremonies, a new dance couple and, well, all new from top to bottom. Maxim and Odette have danced their way around the world, with waltz and toe routines their forte. Libby Frazier, the demure little singer, is pleasing audiences nightly with the orchestra. Lots of room at the Grove for dancing.

Maestro and Master of Magic

Norfolk, Va., April 22 (AP).—State Senator Vivian L. Page, of Norfolk, said today he was considering withdrawing from the contest for lieutenant governor and announcing for the Democratic nomination for Governor in opposition to James H. Price.

Page, one of three candidates for lieutenant governor, said he had been urged to make the change.

Man Shot in Clash Of Mine Unions Dies

Columbus, Kans., April 22 (AP).—Lavoice Miller, 23, one of nine shot in a clash between rival miners' unions at Galena, Kans., died in a Joplin, Mo., hospital today. Assistant County Attorney A. L. Majors said murder charges were being considered.

Assault charges have been filed against 10 members of the international union affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization. Gunfire broke up a Sunday parade of the "blue card" union which later affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

$20,000 P. O. Robbery.

Chicago, April 22 (AP).—Postal authorities reported today burglars broke into the suburban Melrose Park postoffice, burned their way into a vault with acetylene torches and took $20,000 in Government bonds, stamps and cash.

On the Air Today

The time has come to cast out the semi-annual warning in regard to daylight saving time. Virtually all your favorite programs will be heard just one hour earlier than usual beginning next Sunday. A few will remain at the same hour. Some may even be changed to a different day of the week.

Although every effort is made to check all programs, beginning Sunday, it is a rare week when no errors whatever take place as the clock is moved forward one hour in New York and is not in Washington. A radio station outside New York in a city not using daylight saving time becomes something of a madhouse as the staff juggles network and local programs. Naturally the change in New York programming affects all local program periods as well.

Be sure to check The Post radio timetable daily next week until the new schedules become familiar to you.

A clipping has arrived from WOL giving a little background on the dance band situation in Chicago. It seems that both NBC and Mutual wanted Paul Whiteman and his orchestra as a sustaining feature when the "dean of American modern music" went to the Drake Hotel for an extended engagement. Chicago's WGN has long prided itself as carrying the finest array of evening dance music in the Middle West—and argued that inasmuch as the station always had favored hotels in giving time for their dance orchestras (as a Mutual station, WGN feeds such orchestras to the Mutual net) it deserved exclusive rights to Whiteman's music. NBC felt it had a priority claim in view of Whiteman's many commercial programs on that network. The Drake went into a huddle with itself and came out with exclusive service for Mutual.

The "Saturday Night Party" will drop its name and move to a full hour on the same network (WRC, locally) Sunday nights effective the second or third week in May. The cast will remain the same—but a new name given it. J. H. H.

C. of C. Will Vote On I. C. C. Clause

By the Associated Press.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States submitted to its membership yesterday the question of whether Congress should repeal the "long and short haul clause" of the Interstate Commerce act.

This clause prohibits railroads from charging a lower rate for a long haul than for a shorter haul on the same route in the same direction. Legislation to repeal the clause was passed by the House; the Senate has not acted.

The question was submitted by the Chamber committee on transporation, which recommended repeal.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

ALICE HUGHES.

THE RASH of "society" entertainers has just broken out here again with redoubled violence, like a plague of galloping German measles. A half dozen of the snootier night clubs now boast warblers almost guaranteed Social Register, that oft-quoted tome which nobody reads and means nothing. The bellwether of them all, Eve Symington, lovely matron, mother of sons aged 11 and 9, daughter of Congressman Wadsworth and granddaughter of the Revered John Hay, sings again in the uppity Sert Room of the Waldorf, at a salary now in four figures. She began her "career" in 1934 and has enjoyed uninterrupted success. P. S. She sings nicely, too. Lawrence - "Teeney" White has unleased his barytone; Mrs. David Oliver Shoemaker thought up the professional name "Wanda Mara" and opened an engagement and her throat at the Club Bali. Still others are Cobina Wright and Lady Susanne Wilkins.

Why do you suppose so many expensive night spots hire these boys and girls from the right side of the New York Central tracks? With all due respect for what they have of talent and personality, the swarthy gents who own such gilded joints nourish flaming hopes that the society singers will pull better than their weight from the social circles in which they move. The good old bar-bill is the acid test of a cafe name—whether that name be Dotty Bra-strap from Broadway, or Lottie Ice-face from Park avenue.

And so they trill way, with their little voices and personalities. Poor little rich girls—we all want to see them get along! But you should hear the language of fine professional entertainers who really have to live from such jobs! Still, maybe you shouldn't—you'd believe the worst of us!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The absolute dramatic smash of the spring has been Maurice Evans' appearance in "Richard II"—and if we duly cherchez le femme in the matter, we find Miss Margaret Webster, a dark, attractive young woman who was brought all the way from London to produce the Shakespearean tid-bit on Broadway. Oddly enough, though she has been appearing in the British capital for a dozen years, she's New York born—though this is her first visit since the age of 3!

* * * *

Say, will you finish this piece for me, please? The town is sun-drenched and clear-eyed, and I know that outdoors the pigeons of St. Patrick's Cathedral are strutting fatter and sassier than ever, and the spring crop of dreamers are dozing on the stone benches of Bryant Park, and little girls are matching their voices against the thunder of the elevated! In short, I want to take walk—I'm gtttting on, and won't see so many more spring, I suppose. Can't do it? Oh well, thanks anyway.

* * * *

Another of our girls moves to a top spot in a huge department store, while men executives mutter bad words into their beards. Pageen Fitzgerald, of the Chauncey Olcottish name and the bright talent, has just been boosted to the rank of publicity and sales director in charge of fashion promotion. . .

* * * *

Whom should I see at a night club a few eves ago but Michael Farmer, who was Mr. Gloria Swanson not so long ago. The pretty girl with him, Vanya Nardi, a beauty from the French Casino show. Ah well—Mike was always one who liked nice things

* * * *

Jack Trepel, my florist friend up in Rockefeller Center who mystifies business callers with card tricks, is speializing right now in matching corsages with the girls' favorite perfumes. Jack asks the eager young men, and then supplies the lilies of the valley, gardenis, roses, jasmines, violets, or what has he?

Etiquette of Letters

HOW MADDENING! To slave writing a letter and have to chuck it into the wastebasket because we're not sure it's right.

It's letters to people we don't know well that worry us. Suppose they misjudge us for some etiquette slip?

Here are a few pointers to make us letter perfect:

In accepting or refusing an invitation, use the same style in which the invitation is given. If formal in tone, write: "We shall be delighted to spend the week-end of May 16 with you," or "We regret that we have a previous engagement for the sixteenth." If informal, say, "I think the Sunday supper will be fun. We'd love to come!" or "If only we could accept your jolly invitation . . .!"

Don't begin with an apology. You won't be tempted to if you reply promptly. But if you delay, plunge to the heart of your letter—"The lovely roses you sent are still fresh and fragrant," or "We enjoyed every minute of our week-end with you."

Don't say "It was a wonderful party. The music was wonderful. I had a wonderful time." Increase your vocabulary if you'd make your letter charming.

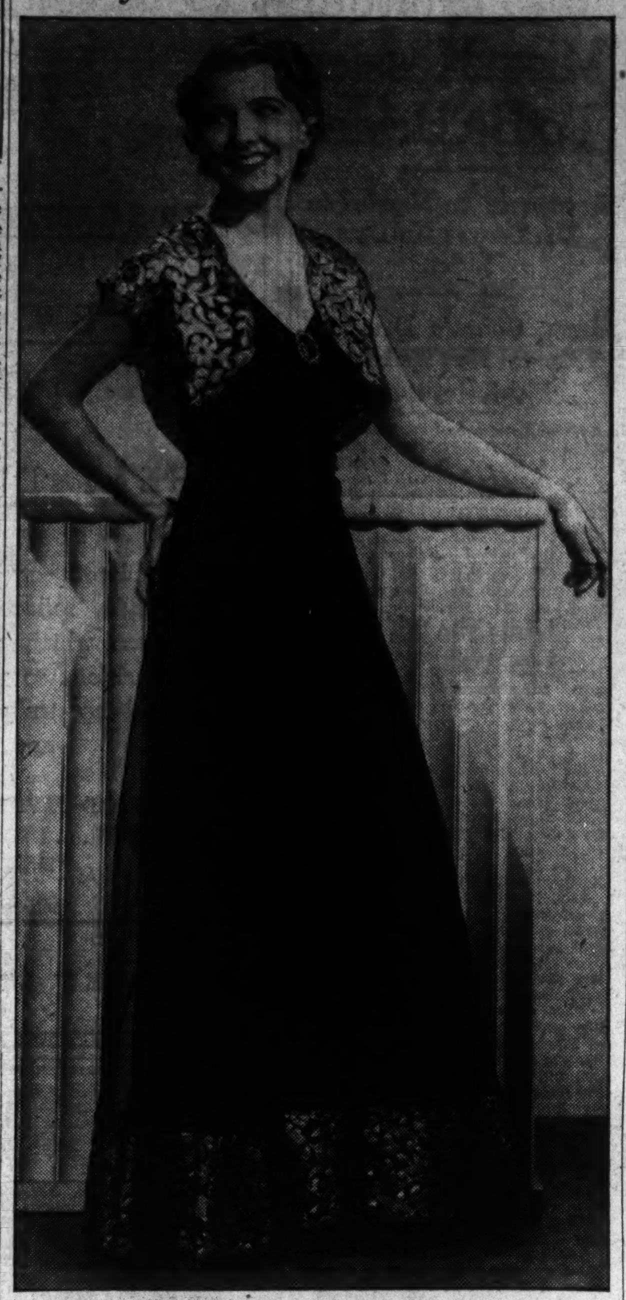
Send 15 cents for our booklet "How To Write Letters For All Occasions," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Filmy Black and Gold Leather



Yards and yards of ethereal transparent marquisette fashion this graceful evening gown of black, trimmed with a border, and bolero jacket of gold leather openwork. It is a dramatic affair, exclusive and individual, in a season of numerous style trends and influences, suitable to complement all complexions, but especially recommended by stylists as a perfect color scheme for the blonde with golden hair. To give the illusion of two separate costumes, it may be smartly worn without the little bolero jacket. Marquisette is one of the leading fabrics for summer, for both daytime and formal evening.

New Zealand Tea Room Expert Is Visiting Twin in Washington

People 'Down Under' Like Substantial Food, Spurn Cocktails, Says Miss Mildred (Pink) Trent, Who Returns in June.

By Rebekah Blake.

Miss Mildred Trent, known more familiarly as "Pink," is not only one-half of the identical Trent twins, known as "Pink" and "Blue," but the head of the largest tea room in New Zealand, at Christ Church.

Miss Mildred is at present visiting her twin sister, Maud, who, though originally from New Zealand, has lived in this country for the last 20 years with Col. and Mrs. Frank T. Leighton, now living at 2804 Thirty-fourth place northwest. After such a long separation, the twins have many things to do and many places to see, but they do not need to get acquainted, for, as they say, "twins are never strangers to each other."

Miss Trent studied home economics at school in England and received her first experience in the tea room business in London, where she spent five years. "This was very important to me," she says, "for it taught me the business from the bottom up." Not only is she a tea room manager, but also an excellent cook.

2,000 Customers Daily.

There are about 135,000 persons in Christchurch, and nearly 2,000 of these pay a visit to Miss Trent's green and gold tea room daily. Tea rooms are very important to the people of England's possessions. No doubt more business is transacted over teacups than any other place. "That is the reason we advocate tables for two," says Miss Trent. The tables in her tea room are honey-colored and hand-woven damask cloths are used on them. White cloths are used for afternoon tea.

Morning tea, luncheon and afternoon tea are the only meals served here during the week, but on Friday the shops of the town stay open late, as week-end shopping is done then instead of Saturday. "On week days we close at 5:15 and at 12 on Saturdays, and we are not open at all on Sunday," said Miss Trent, who has 60 employes in her shop.

The cocktail hour is not popular in New Zealand. No tea room or restaurant has a liquor license, and no liquor is sold after 6 p. m. When such a license is granted, and there are very few, it is given to the building instead of the manager.

Like Substantial Food.

New Zealanders like substantial food, according to Miss Trent. They especially enjoy roast meat and hot vegetables. A girl is not permitted to work in New Zealand more than four hours without a meal.

A visitor to New Zealand would never lack for food. No matter how many places he might visit in an afternoon, he would be given some form of sustenance at each place. However, food would be somewhat different from that in America. Sweets would be lacking, to a large extent. The fruit cocktail would be served as the last course instead of the first. A typical New Zealand dinner would be:

Soup or oysters on the half shell
Meat
Hot vegetables
(Salad only if cold meat is served)
Bread and butter (never hot bread)
Sweets
(To Americans this would be a pudding or jello)
Dessert (raw fruit)

Miss Trent has written two cook books which have now been combined into one, "Modern Cookery." She also has a private cook book with her secret recipes in it. Miss Maud Trent also has secret recipes which she will not divulge to her dearest friends.

Leaves U. S. in June.

"Pink" is leaving this country early in June, for she must be back at her work before August, which is her busiest month. When she arrives home she will settle herself again in her small home, where she lives alone and spends much of her spare time working in her garden, reading, knitting and embroidering Much of her fancy work is given to friends. There are three girls and one brother besides the twins in the Trent family, and "all of the others are married and have lots of children." All but Miss Maud live in New Zealand and see each other frequently, for it is not difficult to travel from one end of the islands to the other in a short time.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Couple Love Each Other But Man, Once Divorced, Shies at Altar; Girl Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I want your advice on getting married. I am 24 years old. I don't have very much education. I finished eleventh grade, then went in training as a nurse. I stayed two years and had to come home because of poor health. At present I am working in a very good restaurant.

* * * *

The boy friend is 27 years old. He was married when he was 18, lived with his wife a year and then divorced her. I knew his wife and what she was like. No one could get along with her. He is not in love with her now, I am sure of that. He only went to the tenth grade in school and has never had a chance to go again or to take up any kind of business course. He has been driving a truck for a big company for seven years. His salary averages $20 a week or more.

* * * *

We have been going together for three years and are very much in love. We both like the same things and would do anything in the world for each other. I was sick about four weeks and no one could have been sweeter or kinder to me. Neither of us has ever had a lot of money but have lived as well as the average or better. We both know the value of a dollar. We have saved several hundred dollars.

* * * *

I want to get married now and so does he. But he has his doubts sometimes. He feels that he didn't make a go of it once and might not again. He seems to be afraid of the future. But one never knows what that will be. I don't think we will gain anything by waiting as we have been going together long enough to know each other. We are both crazy about children and want to have our own. Neither of us goes with anyone else.

My father and mother will object if I marry him but they would object no matter who it was. Please tell us what to do. We read your column daily and put great faith in the advice you give others.

UNCERTAIN.

Problem for Seer.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: The story is told of an irresolute young man who once upon a time went to an ancient oracle with his problem. Having told his tale, he finished with the question, "Should I marry, or shouldn't I?" And the oracle replied, "My son, whichever you do, you'll regret it." The same could probably be said with equal truth of you and your young man.

* * * *

However, it appears to me that you two are likely to make each other as suitable mates as you could ever hope to find. The age difference is just about right, you seem to be coequal in matters of education, background and native intelligence; both are industrious, thrifty and adaptable to reality and, to top the whole thing off nicely, you are steadfastly and tenderly in love with each other.

* * * *

Since the burned child dreads the fire, it is not unnatural that the young man's adolescent mismarriage should have left him distrustful not only of marriage as an institution but of his own fitness for the role of husband. But he should sensibly put such childish fears behind him, realizing that age and experience tend to produce trustworthy judgment. As persons mature at this period in human history, no boy or girl is really capable of choosing a mate to cleave to for life until he or she is at least 23 to 25 years old. It was rather to be expected, therefore, that this immature experiment in marriage would fizzle out.

* * * *

I must remind you, however, that two persons' preeminent suitability for marriage with each other will not guarantee a happy or lasting marriage unless the economic aspect of the situation is adequately taken care of. And I question whether you could really enjoy a family life which included children on this man's income. You say he makes approximately $20 a week. That is scarcely sufficient to support one person nowadays and yet his income would have to support both of you and children besides, supposing children came. Babies would mean dovetailing full time to housekeeping and their care, or keeping your job and hiring a substitute at home. And on your salary, I wonder if the latter course would represent any savings or profit in the long run?

* * * *

In the face of such conflicting considerations, who is to say whether you should or should not marry this man? Like the oracle of old, one can only prophesy that if you don't marry him, you will probably regret the fact that you didn't; and if you do marry, there will undoubtedly be times when you will wish that you hadn't taken the irrevocable step.

M. H.

Black Gown Adorned By White Butterflies

Paris (U.P.).—The Countess Rene de Chambrun, who was Jose Laval, daughter of the famous French premier before her marriage, ordered some Schiaparelli clothes before sailing for America on the Queen Mary. One of her evening gowns was a black crepe printed with white butterflies of different variety and size. The dress was simply made, with a high, round neck, fitted waist and long, rather tight skirt.

Remove as many as possible of the remaining bones one at a time, using a small pair of tweezers, after pushing apart the fillets that inclose them. Four rows of bones will be found on each side of the fish. Wipe with a damp cheesecloth, sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon pepper and brush with 1 tablespoon salad oil. Lay the shad on a hot oiled plank or oven platter skin down and place in a 400 degrees F. oven for 30 minutes. With pastry bag and tube make a border of mashed potato around the plank. Lay 2 tomatoes peeled and cut in halves around the fish. Cover with 1 small green pepper, chopped, and 1 shallot or 1 tablespoon onion chopped fine and seasoned with ½ teaspoon salt, Put 1 tablespoon butter in pieces over the fish. bake 15 minutes, or until through, remove from oven, sprinkle with 3 tablespoons lemon juice and garnish with lemon slices through each of which is pushed a sprig of parsley.

Day-Dreaming Good for Child, Writer Asserts

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Not all day-dreaming is harmful. There are day-dreams that are merely rehearsals in preparation for the future, and more than one successful man or woman planned and in imagination lived his career before he actually put it into action.

The ambitious child who tells himself stories of the future and at the same time does his best to make his stories come true, need never be a source of anxiety to anyone. Some of the world's greatest thinkers and scientists have been inveterate day-dreamers.

Healthy day-dreams exercise and stretch the imagination, and in their province are quite as important as gymnastics and sports are for the body, or mathematics and history for the mind. It is a good plan for a child to set himself a goal which he must grow to reach. The bigger and more beautiful his air castles, the more effort he must make to achieve them in reality.

It is only when the castles become an end in themselves that they are harmful. The child who is satisfied only to dream and makes no attempt to realize his dreams, is treading a dangerous path. He may one day step out of active life altogether. Many dreamers of this kind end in sanitariums, others are on the list of the permanently unemployed, none of them succeed.

So long as a child is interested in life and taking part in it, so long as his school work and social life are normal, so long as he is living life instead of watching it pass by, day-dreams will probably help rather than hinder his development.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Ancient Medical Advice.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Among the ancient fathers of medicine, the Jewish physicians always have had a place of honor. Rabbi Ben Ezra, celebrated by Browning, Maimonides, and Isaac Ben Solimon have a place in every account of old medicine.

The last struck the keynote which has been getting louder and stronger through the ages, when he said, "The most important duty of the physician is to prevent illness."

Other of his aphorisms were:

"Employ only one medicine at a time in all your cases and note its effects carefully."

Never Knock Doctors.

"Never speak unfavorably of other physicians. Every one of us has his lucky and unlucky hours."

The Talmud has been praised by many medicine historians for its knowledge of many diseases and remedies, reflecting a very modern viewpoint. Fever is regarded as "Nature's effort to expel morbific matter and restore health."

A sudden change in diet was regarded as injurious, and this truth is reflected frequently in Hebrew writings (see Maimonides below). The Talmud was full of knowledge about childbirth; it advised Caesarean section on the living and dead mother in proper cases. Chanina Ben Chania inserted wooden and natural teeth as early as the second century B. C.

The most famous commentator on the Talmud was Maimonides. He was born in Cordova, Spain, in 1135, but lived most of his life in the East, the physician to the great Sultan Saladin, prominent in chronicles of the Crusades.

Pertinent Today.

In his comment on the Talmud, these aphorisms occur, which are as pertinent as the day they were written:

"Food should be taken always in the sitting position. There should be no riding nor walking, nor movements of the body until digestion is finished. The man who takes a walk or any strenuous occupation immediately after eating subjects himself to serious dangers of disease."

"Another axiom of medicine is that so long as a man is able to be active and vigorous, does not eat until he is overfull, and does not suffer from constipation, he is not liable to disease. Even such men, however, are much safer if they do not take food that may disagree with them."

"Most diseases come from either eating too much or partaking of unsuitable food. That was what Solomon meant with his proverb: 'He who puts a guard over his mouth and his tongue protects himself from many evils,' that is to say, whoever protects his mouth from the overindulgence in food and his tongue from unsuitable speech protects himself from many evils."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of The Washington Post. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

First Lady Honor Guest Of Congressional Club

Mrs. Roosevelt Seated at Right of President, Mrs. Reed, at Annual Breakfast; Wears Wine-Colored Dress With Silver Fox Fur.

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a wine-colored dress, made with a high neck, and with it she had on a small black hat and a silver fox fur. Mrs. Hughes wore a gray costume with a lavender straw hat.

Others Present.

Others seated with them were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Mr. Justice Stone; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wife of Mr. Justice Roberts; Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, of Ohio; Mrs. Lindley H. Hadley, of Washington; Mrs. Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, and Mrs. William M. Whittington, of Mississippi, past presidents of the club, and members of the club board. These included, in addition to Mrs. Reed, who wore a redingote dress of black over black and white, with a wide black hat; Mrs. S. Otis Bland, Mrs. Harry L. Englebright, Mrs. John E. Rankin, Mrs. Joe L. Smith, Mrs. William H. Larrabee, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Mrs. Karl Stefan and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster.

A patriotic theme was carried out in the party. At the far end of the room, where the Marine Band Orchestra played, the American flag waved on a high standard and, immediately after Mrs. Roosevelt and the others at her table had taken their places, the room was darkened and a spotlight turned on it as "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played. Little bows of red, white and blue ribbon were tied on the handles of the grapefruit shells in which the first course of the breakfast was served and the colors were repeated in the club seal on the front of the menu and program for the occasion.

Mrs. Reed presented Mrs. Roosevelt to the guests and she made a brief greeting following which Mrs. Ralph Church, chairman of the program, introduced Charlotte Symons, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who sang three groups of songs, accompanied by Milne Charnley at the piano. Among her numbers were the aria from "Madame Butterfly" and the aria "Depuis le Jour" from "Louise." Her singing delighted her audience.

Members Assist.

Associate members of the club who assisted in seating the guests included Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., Miss Ann Blanton, Miss Margaretta Campbell, Miss Rheba Doughton, Mrs. Robert Earle, Mrs. John Marshall, Miss Ruth Reed, Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden and the Misses Margaret and Mary Clements.

With Mrs. Wadden at the breakfast was her sister, Mrs. Edwin Fuller Parham, of Henderson, N. C., the former Miss Margaret Pou, who also assisted and who is making a short visit in Washington. Mrs. William Doak was also among the guests and there were many from out of the city who were entertained by members of the club at the affair. Mrs. Jesse Wolcott, wife of Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, had with her Mrs. Mervin Tomlin, Mrs. A. L. Easter, Mrs. James Mugan, Mrs. John B. Schaller and Miss Evelyn Murphy, all members of a club to which she belongs in Port Huron. These guests, with several others from there, are visiting the Wolcotts. Mrs. Andrew May had with her Mrs. O. F. Ligon, of Prestonburg, Ky.

Former Leader to Speak at Lodge Meeting Tonight.

Mrs. William R. Adams Entertains Chapter O of P.E.O. Group.

The Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, will give a series of entertainments in honor of the past grand regent, Mrs. Jane Debus, of Columbus, Pa., who arrived in Washington yesterday.

Tonight Mrs. Debus will be the guest of honor and speaker at the meeting to be held at Moose Hall at 8 o'clock.

Tomorrow night a membership banquet will be held at the Kenesaw in honor of Mrs. Debus.

In addition to the senior regent, Mrs. Susie Sorenson, the committee on arrangements consists of Junior Regent Mrs. Frances Baldwin, Past Regent Mrs. Anna Wagner, Pianist Miss Frances Gunter, and Coworker Mrs. Marie Clark.

Mrs. Debus has been nationally prominent in the work of the Moose fraternity for a number of years, having served last year in the capacity of grand regent of the Women of the Moose, the highest honor in the organization. She has traveled extensively among the chapters all over the United States, presenting a program of committee activity which has greatly stimulated interest in the organization and increased its membership.

The past grand regent also is serving as president of "Friendship," an honorary degree which is conferred on members for meritorious and outstanding service to the order.

The local membership committee, of which Mrs. Margaret Bates is chairman, has completed plans for the initiation tonight of a class of 20 in honor of Mrs. Debus.

Grand recorder of the Women of the Moose, Miss Katherine Smith, also has accepted the invitation of Columbia Chapter to attend the meeting this evening.

Mrs. Willis R. Adams, Ontario Apartments, was hostess to Chapter O, P. E. O. Sisterhood, Tuesday evening. Miss Julia MacMillan, president of this new chapter in the District, presided at the business meeting. Arrangements were made for the presentation of Peggy Norris Hutson, lyric soprano, in recital at Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets northwest, Tuesday night, May 18, at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Hutson, a member of Chapter O, is well known as prima donna in "Naughty Marietta," "Fortune Teller," "Mlle. Modiste," "Blossom Time," "Sally," and "No, No, Nanette." Her concert will be a costume recital in four parts, including old English folk songs, songs of the South, and light opera. She will be assisted by Raymond Baines, tenor, and Marvin Gardner, barytone.

Mrs. Hutson appeared on the program at the annual convention of the District of Columbia Chapter held in March.

The University of Michigan Alumnae Association will be entertained at a bridge and monopoly party Wednesday, April 28, at 8 p. m. by the associate members at 6902 Piney Branch road northwest.

A peace meeting sponsored by the Washington Committee of the Women's Trade Union League, the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, the Women's Auxiliary of Bakers Union, Women's Auxiliary of Typographical Union and Hotel Restaurant Workers of the Employes Alliance will be held at Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., Tuesday at 8 p. m.

The speakers will be Senator Lynn J. Frazier, Representative Robert Allen and Marion Hedges, research director of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Former Representative Jeannette Rankin will preside.

Final arrangements are being made for the second annual card party and dance to be held under the auspices of the District of Columbia Chapter of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae at the Wardman Park Hotel May 4. This event is to raise funds to provide scholarships for teaching sisters seeking higher degrees in education.

As the affair will inaugurate the beginning of the social program of the federation under recently elected officers, much interest has been shown by members of the federation and its affiliated associations.

The committee, headed by Miss Regina Hartnett as chairman, has announced a partial list of patrons and patronesses among whom are Mrs. Anthony J. Diamond, Mrs. Lewis A. Payne, Mrs. James E. Colliflower, Mrs. Gerald Egan, Mrs. Daniel R. Forbes, Mrs. Mildred Bennert, Mrs. Thomas J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Augustus Geigengack, Mrs. John Cammack, Mrs. Thomas A. Baldwin, Mrs. H. The annual meeting of the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom will be held at the Washington Hotel April 30.

Hernandez' Art Display Begins On Wednesday

Mrs. Francis Biddle Will Arrive for Exhibit at Studio House.

Mrs. Francis Biddle, who resided in Washington when her husband was chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, will come here from Philadelphia on Wednesday for the opening of an exhibition of drawings and prints of animals by Mateo Hernandez, distinguished Spanish sculptor.

Mrs. Biddle is herself a poet of reputation under the name of Katharine Garrison Chapin. She became interested in Hernandez's work through her sister, Cornelia Van A. Chapin, who is a sculptress and works with him in Paris.

There will be a small tea held with the preview, which will be held at Studio House.

The work of Mateo Hernandez has only recently become known in the United States. The first exhibition of his sculpture was held at the Brummer Galleries, in New York, in 1935. In 1936 the Metropolitan Museum acquired his "Black Panther" carved in diorite. Everything which Hernandez does is cut directly in the block of stone.

Miss Fulton, Miss Kessler To Be Brides

Former to Be Married to Mr. Carow; No Date Is Set.

Army Officer's Daughter Is to Be Wed to Lieut. Brownlee.

An engagement of interest is that of Miss Mary Mershon Kessler to Lieut. Laurance Hilliard Brownlee, Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Bedell Brownlee, announced by her mother, Mrs. Percy M. Kessler, and another that of Miss Ruth Wynne Fulton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Creed W. Fulton, to Mr. Glenn B. Carow, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Carow, of Washington.

Both Miss Fulton and her fiance are students and teachers of music.

They go to Baltimore daily for lessons at the Peabody Conservatory, and Mr. Carow broadcasts every Saturday evening over the radio.

When Fritz Kreisler was delayed by a train wreck and arrived late for his concert in Constitution Hall last winter, Mr. Carow was called upon from the audience to play until Kreisler arrived. His performance was greeted with much enthusiasm.

Mrs. Kessler announced the engagement of her daughter at a small informal tea she gave yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Brownlee, mother of the prospective bridegroom, who is here from her home in Woodmere, Long Island.

Miss Kessler attended Saint Nicholas School and the University of Washington, and was graduated last June from the College of William and Mary. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Chi Delta Phi, and Gamma Phi Beta social sorority. She is a daughter of the late Col. Percy M. Kessler, U. S. A., and a sister of Mr. William H. Kessler, of San Francisco; Lieut. Robert H. Kessler, U. S. A., of Fort Monroe, Va.; Mrs. Pierre A. Agnew, wife of Capt. P. A. Agnew, U. S. A., and Mrs. Alice Hays.

Lieut. Brownlee received his preparatory education at Far Rockaway High School, Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, and Devitt Preparatory School, and was graduated from the United States Military Academy with the class of 1929. He is a member of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity, Sons of the American Revolution, the West Point Army Mess, and the Army and Navy Club. At present he is stationed at West Point, where he is an instructor of French and drawing. His brother, Lieut. Robert C. Brownlee, 2d, U. S. N., is on duty at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis.

The wedding will take place the latter part of May.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson Assists in Function at Mayflower Hotel; Mrs. David Sellers Among Those Pouring at Tea Table.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison were "at home" to members of the Navy and Marine Corps stationed in and near Washington yesterday afternoon at a reception held in the Mayflower Hotel.

The hosts were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the chief of naval operations, and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of the major general commandant of the Marine Corps. The Chinese room where they stood was decorated with white and pink snapdragons, great sprays of which were arranged against a background of palms and ferns behind them. In the ballroom adjoining, a buffet table extended more than half the length of the room and that, too, was decorated with bouquets of snapdragons in tall silver vases and, at one end, was a cake with the Assistant Secretary's flag designed in icing.

Mrs. Edison wore a chartreuse gown, made with a short jacket, the sleeves of which were trimmed in bands of fur. Mrs. Swanson wore a beige satin and crepe dress with a broad black hat and fox fur; Mrs. Leahy was in brown, her dress with pleated cape sleeves, and hat exactly the same shade, and wore a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley, and Mrs. Holcomb was in black, the high neck of her dress caught with rhinestone clips, and a red flower trimming her wide black hat. THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

Never have we been so intrigued by any car as we were by one we saw yesterday morning going down Massachusetts avenue. Our attention was attracted by a cream and brown phaeton that kept pace with us in the double-lane traffic. Its dark brown top was firmly fastened down, thus giving the owner, who was then driving—Rear Admiral Witthoeft—and his chauffeur, who sat beside him, a splendid chance at the sunshine and balmy breezes. This car—a Mercedes—had tricky little gadgets that shot out and up, flashing in the light, and warning that a turn was about to be made.

"Stape" Staples was having a marvelous time down at the station seeing some friends off for New York the other day.

We had been thinking the past few days were a trifle warmish, and now we know it. When a person who comes from a much more torrid clime is forced to abandon his topcoat and unbutton his coat, there must be something to this rising temperature business. We saw Manuel Quezon sauntering through the Shoreham lobby, coming in from a walk, perhaps, and he looked as though he thought the day were anything but chilly.

Little Helen Hurban, small pigtailed daughter of the Czechoslovakian Minister and Mme. Hurban, found the icy floor of the ballroom out at the Shoreham a great place for dancing. She accompanied her parents there for the recent diplomatic skating party, and while her elders watched or skated, she whirled, spiraled and skipped about. Stopping in front of her smiling mother, this wee tot said—"Now, mother, clap if I'm good—"

A short time after that the spotlight came to rest on the youngster—her eyes danced and sparkled and she fled to her mother. "Oh," she exclaimed—"I'm going to be a star—they lighted me!"

Dominican Envoy To London Is Host

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios were among the guests of the Minister of the Dominican Republic to London and Mme. Max Henriquez Urena, at dinner, followed by the ice carnival entertainment, at the Shoreham last evening.

Other guests included Dr. Victor A. Belaunde, Peruvian delegate to the boundary commission meeting in Washington; the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, the Counselor of the Dominican Legation and Mme. Garcia Godoy, Prof. and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Prof. and Mrs. H. C. Lancaster, of Johns Hopkins University, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Senorita Laura de los Rios, Miss Marie Lancaster, Dr. Roberto D. de Mendoza, the First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy, Mr. Manuel Giron Cerna, and Miss Irene Wright.

The bride-to-be is a daughter of Mrs. Presley Morgan Taylor, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Grafton Minot, of Boston and Paris. Her mother was formerly Miss Constance Gardner, granddaughter of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, jr., Miss Roberta Marshall, Miss Mary Augusta Biddle, sister of the bridegroom-elect; Miss E. Nell Gilkyson and Miss Huldah Bradley, of Philadelphia; Miss Margaret Rives, of New York, and Miss Anita Curtis, of Boston, will also be among Miss Minot's attendants. Her maid of honor will be Miss Matilda Fassitt and Mr. Charles S. Taylor will be best man for Mr. Biddle.

The ceremony will take place in Holy Trinity Church.

By Merrell Whittlesey.

Playing the rugged Washington layout in 84 strokes, and taking full advantage of an 8 handicap, Miss Ellen Kincaid, 18-year-old Congressional golfer, won the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial Invitation tournament yesterday with a net 76, four strokes ahead of Mrs. Florence Godfrey, of Beaver Dam.

Mrs. Betty Meckley, holder at one time of virtually every title in this section, played her second 18-hole round of golf since the middle of October and tied for the low gross honors with an 84. Mrs. Meckley took the low gross prize and Miss Kincaid the main trophy.

The tournament opened the women's tournament golf season, although it was not sponsored by the W. D. G. A., but by the members of the host course, headed by Mrs. T. M. DeLashmutt

Helen Dettwelier needed a par 4 on the last hole for an 82 and low gross honors, but wound up with a distastrous 7 and trailed the low gross winners by a stroke. Her plus 1 handicap netted 86.

Miss Kincaid made her 1937 local tournament debut in impressive fashion as the trophy marked her first victory in a major event and her score was the lowest shot in her golf career. The former Beaver Dam member and protege of Freddie McLeod was out in 43 with 6's on the fifth and sixth holes and finished with a 6 after making 5 consecutive pars to start the nine.

Mrs. Meckley's score was not only made with little or no practice, but with a set of clubs she was using for the second time. The Indian Spring star played the seventeenth hole in sensational fashion, after driving out of bounds she drove 250 yards, the ball finding the ditch, and played her next shot from an iron pipe to within 8 feet of the pin.

Mrs. Godfrey took second low net honors with a 94-14, 80, a stroke ahead of Mrs. Meckley's low net, 84-3, 81, and Mrs. K. S. Giles, of Indian Spring, with 88-7, 81.

The finishing hole was costly to all the leaders. The winner missed a 12-foot putt that would have netted a 5 after missing the second and third shots. Mrs. Meckley three-putted three greens and missed comparatively short putts on other holes.

Scores ran high, only 4 golfers breaking 90 and only 15 breaking 100. Mrs. Meckley's 41 was low on the first nine, as was the winner's 41 on the back nine.

The tournament was in honor of the late Mrs. Phyllis Keeler Miller, first secretary of the Women's District Golf Association, when the group broke away from the men's organization. She was a member of Washington.

Miss Ellen Kincaid (Congressional), 43, 43—84—8—76; Mrs. Florence Godfrey (Beaver Dam), 48, 46—94—14—80; Mrs. Betty Meckley (Indian Spring), 41, 43—84—3—81; Mrs. K. S. Giles (Indian Spring), 42, 46—88—7—81; Miss Helen Dettweiler (Congressional), 42, 43—85, plus 1—86; Mrs. H. A. Knox (Congressional), 47, 50—97—11—86; Mrs. L. G. Prey (Manor), 47, 44—91—7—84; Mrs. W. But 60-Day Ban Is Laid On Trainer

State Rule Which Holds Handler Responsible Necessitates Bar.

Previous 'Injustice' to Denemark Employe Is Rescinded.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., April 22.—The State Racing Commission today absolved Trainer Bert S. Michell of any knowledge that Mrs. Emil Denemark's filly All Round was illegally stimulated at Tropical Park, but ruled him off the turf for 60 days under a rule that holds the trainer responsible for his horses.

The prominent trainer stoutly denied, at a hearing, that he ever "fixed" any horses and his attorney, Dan Chappell, presented evidence tending to show a Negro exercise boy who recently was killed was responsible for administration of strychnine to the mare.

The five-man commission ruled that "the action heretofore taken suspending indefinitely Trainer Bert S. Michell be rescinded."

"There was no evidence to show that Michell had any knowledge of a drug having been administered to the horse all round," the finding continued, "but under racing rules a trainer is held responsible for the condition of his horses at all times. The commission orders him suspended for 60 days from April 8, 1937."

"Greater injustice was never done a man," Chappell commented. "I am confident I can appeal to a court and set the decision aside." He did not say whether he would.

"After considering the chemist's report, are you satisfied the horse was stimulated?" Chairman Joseph R. Stein asked Michell after the trainer had told his story.

"I have no reason to believe the fellow didn't take an honest test," the gray-haired trainer replied in a cultured English accent. "I'd be kind of a dumb fool to question it."

"And you consider yourself bound by the rule that makes the trainer responsible for the horses in his stable?"

"I consider it a rule invented by Donovan," Michell declared, saying that Walter H. Donovan, former secretary of the commission, had drafted it and that the new body which took office January 1 "just took it up."

Michell said it was physically impossible for the trainer of a large stable, such as the 40 Denemark horses, to be fully responsible.

2,400 Watch Girl Wrestlers

A capacity crowd, reported at 2,400, watched blonde Clara Mortensen, of Glendale, Calif., throw Rita Baker, a brunette from Milwaukee in 10½ minutes of their match in Turner's Arena last night for the women's lightweight wrestling championship of the world. Over 300 were turned away.

In the so-called feature match, Ed Meske, the former University of Minnesota tackle, 218, of Akron, Ohio, was finally floored by Joe Dusek, 221, Omaha, in 21½ minutes. The end came after an exchange of kicks in which Meske gained considerable yardage with his flying tackle.

In the other matches George Koverly tossed George Haban in 7 minutes; Jack Hader and George Leverton grunted to a draw, Rudy Dusek drew with Jack Kennedy, and Abe Coleman tossed Bob Roberts in 10¼ minutes.

3,000 Athletes From 500 Schools to Vie Today and Tomorrow.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, April 22.—Olympic and world champions completed final workouts today as they prepared to join 3,000 college and school boy athletes in the forty-third annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival tomorrow and Saturday.

Athletes from 500 colleges and prep schools, including Luigi Beccali, great Italian miler; Forrest "Spec" Towns, lanky Georgian timber-topper, and an imposing list of world and United States champions await the starter's gun on Franklin Field tomorrow afternoon.

Four Olympic title-holders will compete in their specialities during the 74-event, two-day program. Towns will shoot at his own world record of 13.1 in the 120-yard hurdles. Johnny Woodruff, of Pittsburgh, Olympic 800-meter champion, will compete in the 880-yard race, and Bobby Packard, member of the world's record Olympic sprint relay team, will run in the dash events.

Interest centered in the Saturday mile race in which Becalli will run against Don Lash, Olympic competitor from Indiana University, and Gene Venzke, former University of Pennsylvania runner. Beccali, who holds the world outdoor record of 2:10 for the 1,000-yard run, was favored.

In the field events, Dave Albritton, Ohio State star and Olympic runner-up in the high jump, will defend his world's record of 6 feet, 9¾ inches.

Nats Reopen With A's, Appleton, Fair Fans

By Shirley Povich,

To the shrill shrieks of Ladies' Day fans, far, far from the dishes left to soak in the kitchen sink, the Nats will reappear at Griffith Stadium this afternoon to do battle with their opening-day nemeses—the Athletics.

Amid the ladies' impartial applause for foul pops and three-base hits, the Washington athletes will attempt to better their own ladylike batting efforts on the opening day, when two Philadelphia rookies held 'em to seven hits and beat 'em, 4 to 3.

With a fine disregard for the lady guests, Manager Bucky Harris will start the unhandsomest of the Washington pitchers, grizzled, square-jawed Peter Appleton, whose arm, happily, is his fortune.

There is no record that Peter's pan ever won a beauty prize, but last year his pitching qualified.

There is something official about this particular Ladies' Day. Seems like the Business and Professional Women's clubs of Washington have taken over the arrangements and will sponsor things.

Anyway, there will be a parade to centerfield behind the Metropolitan Police Boys Club Band, with prominent women of Washington in the line of march and a flag raising and everything.

Miss Ruth Robinson, president of the club, will toss out the first ball. She is a right-hander with an overhand delivery. Clark Griffith, showman that he is, readily cooperated with the club and hopes to launch a movement that will include special Ladies' Day ceremonies in all cities.

If Connie Mack follows all indications, he will present as his pitcher for the Nats' disapproval, young Almon Williams, the same guy who set 'em down last Monday after relieving Rookie Edgar Smith in the third inning.

On that occasion, the Nats made only four hits off Williams and no runs at all in the last six innings. The big right-hander, who was the star of Atlanta's pennant-winning Southern Association Club last year, made a scintillating debut in the big leagues.

Washington fans' first opportunity to judge Cecil Travis as the Nats' duly-installed regular shortstop will also be offered today. Now fully recovered from a spike wound in his left knee, Travis will replace Ossie Bluege at the shortstop post and resume his fifth position in the Nats' batting order.

Appleton, DeShong and Newsom will be Bucky Harris' pitching program during the three-game series with the A's. Newsom thus takes his place once again as the Nats' Sunday pitcher.

Ben Chapman is showing three nasty bruises on his thighs—"strawberries," the players call 'em—for his sliding efforts in the Nats' only two games of the year. That's as many as he collected all last season.

Just to keep the record straight, it must be recorded that the Nats were rained out again in New York yesterday. They took an early train to Washington.

I Wanna Pitch!

Buck Newsom's Ready, but Manager Harris Just Isn't.

Buck Newsom, who has virtually ceased wondering how many games he is going to win this season, is now wondering when he is going to pitch a game.

The big pitcher received a terrific jolt to his pride when Manager Bucky Harris refused to name him as the opening-game hurler with President Roosevelt in attendance, but now he is genuinely aroused.

Harris' three-game pitching program in New York did not call for the presence of Newsom in the box for the Nats, either, and Newsom is privately furious.

Harris has let it be known that he does not think Newsom is physically fit yet and lacks speed on his fast ball. Newsom tells his friends that he was never faster in his life than at present. He still wants to be traded.

'Kick-Back,' Fixing Tales Bring Quiz

Inquiry Is Ordered by Body After Rumors of Skullduggery.

By Bill McCormick.

A sweeping secret investigation of all phases of local boxing has been under way for the past three weeks, The Post learned yesterday.

A detailed report was filed with the Boxing Commission yesterday as the probe was concluded. The commission will pass official judgment at a special meeting tonight.

The investigation was ordered by the Boxing Commission because of rumors of "cut backs," "fixed fights" and other alleged irregularities. A trained investigator, whose identity was unknown to even certain members of the commission staff, was hired to delve into the subject.

For a week or two the investigator was able to work entirely under cover. Within the last week or so he has been forced to come more or less out in the open as rumors of the investigation began to trickle out from various sources concerned.

Commission Also Probed.

The probe was not confined to any particular phase of the business, but was all embracing. Even the commission itself and its staff were carefully investigated.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who is particularly concerned with some directions in which the probe was directed, said yesterday that he was glad the commission had taken the steps it did.

"I am certain that I have nothing to cover up and I am very glad the investigation has been held, Ahearn said. "After every fight there are rumors of 'fixing' and 'carrying,' which I know to be untrue. Perhaps when the investigation shows not only that there are no fixed fights in the District, but that all other phases of the game are conducted honestly, those reckless scandal-mongers will stop wagging their tongues with unfounded falsehoods. I think the investigation will do the game a lot of good.

Blair Hits Policy.

The practice of cutting back, as usually understood, consists of a fighter, or his manager, being forced to give a portion of his purses back to someone in authority or responsible for booking him.

Frankie Blair, a New Jersey welterweight, once charged that he had been forced to cut back here. He was brought from New Jersey by the commission and those charges, as well as other accusations, were not sustained by the governing board of boxing.

The Boxing Commission refused to make public the report, or even discuss its contents last night.

"We must carefully consider the investigator's report before making any statement, a commission member said, "After we have perused the report, it will be made public. If boxing, or any phase of boxing, gets a clean bill of health, we shall release that information. If boxing, or any phase of boxing, is found not as it should be, that information too will be released, even if the commission itself is concerned or responsible for the shortcomings."

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

It's 10 to 1 that the next guy you ask will give you the same stock answer: "Sure, I like New York to play in, but wouldn't want to live there."

POVICH.

If he says more than that he's a cinch to add something pretty vague about the town being too big, the cost of living too high, the people too unfriendly and in too much of a rush. He can't lay his finger on his exact dislike for the town; he just knows he wouldn't want to live there.

But Ben Chapman's aversion to New York is all inclusive. He doesn't like the burg, either as a domicile or a playground, and he played there for six years—in Yankee Stadium. As far as Chapman is concerned, the trade that sent him to Washington last summer was perfect.

He was saying today, as the Nats lounged about their Washington-bound train after three days in Manhattan, that he always did think the Indians got the best of the deal when they sold New York to the Dutch for 24 bucks back in the seventeenth century.

He was never happy there even back in those pennant-winning days with the Yankees and in later years when he was off to a slow start with the Yanks he didn't like the boos that rang in his ears. And not liking those boos he showed his dislike.

He upped one day and thumbed his nose at 50,000 New York fans from his centerfield position, pirouetting a couple of times just to make sure that he wasn't missing anybody. That's what the hot-headed Alabaman did, and from that day he was a marked man.

And it didn't help any, either, when a Bronx newspaper in its zealousness to cater to New York's 2,000,000 Jews published the gross libel that Chapman had made a sweeping generalization about Hebrew fans in particular and had indulged in some name-calling.

* * * *

Chapman always did deny that, but the blow had fallen. A very considerable proportion of Yankee fans are Hebrews and down upon the head of the fleet centerfielder crashed a louder and rising crescendo of boos. When his hitting fell off, he sulked and clashed with Manager Joe McCarthy. Then the Yanks decided it was not good business to keep Chapman with the club, and traded him to Washington for Jake Powell last June.

* * * *

With the Nats, Chapman's outlook on life and his batting average perked up. He was the sparkplug that enabled Washington to make a stern bid for second place last season and finally finish fourth. But he still exercised his privilege of hating New York.

* * * *

That extends even to the New York ball team. The first player always to throw the hooks into the Yankees in any conversation is Chapman. And the last to admit that they have a great ball team is the same Alabaman.

* * * *

"Hell's bells," he'll say. . . . "what's so tough about them. There's three or four clubs in this league that can take 'em. Lookit that outfield they had against us the other day (Selkirk, Hoag and Roy Johnson), how are they ever gonna win a pennant with those kind.

* * * *

"With that Yankee stuff written across their chests, they just scare the hell out of a lot of teams, that's all. If some of those other clubs would stand up there and battle 'em like the Washington club does, there wouldn't be anything one-sided about the race. And the Yanks wouldn't win the pennant.

* * * *

"Those people who are picking the Yankees to win the pennant, can have 'em. And as far as the rest of the town is concerned, I always did think those Injuns outsmarted the white folks when they sold out for whatever they got, and pulled out of the place."

Up in Brooklyn where burlesque baseball has been the fan-fare ever since the late Wilbert Robinson's Daffiness boys first started fielding fly balls with their scalps and ignoring the right of way on the bases, they have a new hero—a straight man.

* * * *

He's Heinie Manush, who brings a lifetime batting average of .330-something and fine sense of direction to the Dodgers, both when he's chasing a fly ball or ankling around the paths. In Brooklyn, there's something refreshing about old Heinie's honest-to-goodness big league baseball.

* * * *

He came up from the South leading the entire team at bat in the exhibition games with an average of .376 and Brooklyn fans were ready to warm up to this old-timer who had served with the Tigers, Browns, Nats and Red Sox.

* * * *

So, when Heinie launched the Dodgers' three-run rally in the opener against the Giants with a hot single into rightfield, Brooklyn fans tumbled over themselves in applause. That was the first hit off Hal Schumacher and over in Brooklyn they appreciated it. By the time the game ended, they were applauding even a foul tip off Heinie's bat.

Heinie likes his job in Brooklyn.

8 Pitchers See Action In Wild Tilt

Reds Get 9 Runs in 4th; Stratton Gives 6 Hits as Sox Score.

By the United Press.

New York, April 22.—The St. Louis Cardinals and Pittsburgh Pirates scored their second straight victories of the season today in the only two National League games not rained out. In the American, the Chicago White Sox triumphed to even their series with the St. Louis Browns.

The Cards and Cincinnati Reds staged a wild, free-hitting game with St. Louis coming from behind twice to finally win out, 14-11. Each team used four pitchers and collected 14 hits. Si Johnson started for the Cards, but was shelled from the mound with a nine-run red burst in the fourth. Mike Ryba was knocked out in the same frame, and his relief man Bill McGee lasted only until the sixth when Jim Winford, who got credit for the victory, entered the game. Paul Derringer was the first pitcher for the Reds, but a six-run barrage chased him to the showers in the third. He was succeeded by Don Brennan, Al Hollingsworth and Gene Schott, with the loss being assessed against the latter.

Al Todd's triple, driving in 2 runs in the sixth, gave the Pirates their win over the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 2. Ed Brandt went the route for the Bucs, distributing ten hits. Bill Lee started for Chicago, but was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh, and got credit for losing.

Monty Stratton held the St. Louis Browns to five hits as the White Sox batted out a 6-to-1 victory to avenge their defeat yesterday. Manager Rogers Hornsby batted in the only St. Louis run, getting a single in three times at bat. Zeke Bonura got two of the seven hits given up by Knott and Bonetti, one a homer, the other a double. His first-inning two-bagger drove in 2 runs, a sacrifice fly accounted for another, and his circuit blow brought his total to 4.

All other games were postponed because of rain and wet grounds.

Joe Judge to Talk Over Radio Today

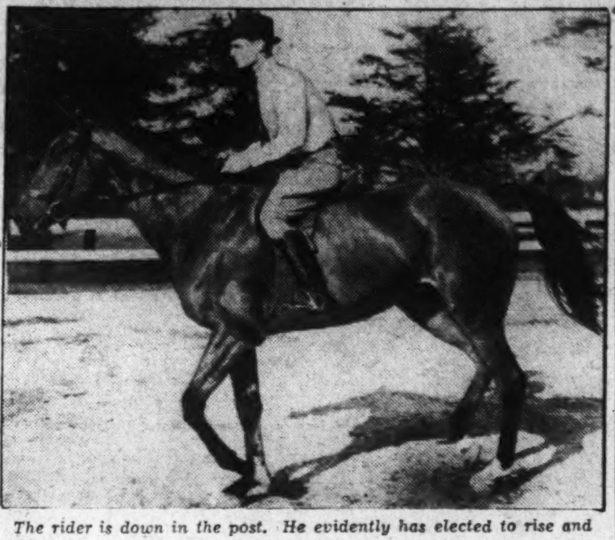
With Harry Bassin, one of his foremost Georgetown University players, the great former first baseman of the Nats broadcasts at 5 p. m. over WJSV. Mel Champ, announcer on the weekly Skipper's Review, will do the interviewing.

Posting Done From Knee Up and At an Angle of 45 Degrees Forward



The rider is down in the post. He evidently has elected to rise and fall with the right forward foot of his mount, which is down now. Excepting that his body is bent slightly more forward than in the walk, the seat is the same. Note the deep seat, the firm and secure, but not stiff, contact between the rider's thigh, knee and calf and the mount. Note also the forward inclination of the rider's upper body, which is bent more forward with each advance in speed of the horse.

By Fritz C. Kleemann
(as told to Bill McCormick)

(This is the fifth in a series of riding lessons by an acknowledged authority. Mr. Kleemann spent many years studying equitation in Europe. At present he is in charge of riding at the Arlington Hall School for Girls.)

Today we learn to post. That is a movement in riding that awes most novice equestrians. It shouldn't, because posting is one of the simplest things you can imagine.

One simply maintains the same easy seat assumed for other gaits, leaning forward just a bit more than for the walk, and synchronizes with the movements of the mounts in the trot.

The two pictures shown here indicate the down and up positions of the post and just how natural, easy and graceful is the movement when done properly. Contrast the post as pictured below with the bouncing about you have seen by uninstructed riders—and then decide which is proper.

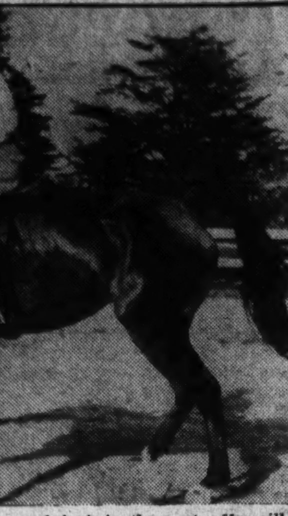
One of the most common mistakes in riding, which is particularly noticeable in posting, is that the rider will first put his feet all the way into the stirrups, which is known as "riding all the way home." When this is done, the ankle is robbed of it's flexibility. At all times the ankle should serve as a shock absorber, and should never be rigid.

Especially in posting it is imperative that the heel be kept down and that one does not ride with too short stirrups. The object of this is to enable the rider to place his knee deep and low against the saddle to avoit high posting. That is one reason our pupil was put through the natural or sitting trot, without stirrups, before being allowed to post.

The posting movement should be from the knee up, and at an angle of 45 degrees forward, not up and down. This will solve the problem of so many inexperienced riders who ask, "Why do I post too high?"

Attention should be called to the fact that it is very important to keep the hands steady at those so-called posting movements of the body. It is a common habit to let the hands follow the up and down movements of the body. This should not be done, since it will irritate the horse's mouth at every step.

In the next lesson we start to gallop.



The rider is up, with the right forward foot, in the post. He will contact the saddle again with his buttocks at the same moment that the right forward foot touches the ground again. In the natural, or sitting trot, the rider feels every step. In posting, he feels every other step. Once the rider gets the feel of this "one-two" rhythm and co-ordinates with it, he will begin to post. With posting comes, gradually, the first real enjoyment of riding.

Yost Recalls 25 Years Of Gridiron History

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Recalling events of a quarter of a century ago as easily and more accurately than the average person discusses current events, Fielding H. Yost, the man who put the hustle in Michigan football with his immortal "Hurry Up" slogan, last night regaled a large audience of Congressmen and former football greats at an informal banquet at the Press Club. The affair was given in his honor by the Touchdown Club.

Illustrating his points with sweeping end runs around the festive board littered with half-filled water glasses and smoking cigarette butts, and bumpy line-bucks over vacant chairs, Yost declared the game is fundamentally the same as it was 30 years ago, but somewhat rougher.

"We developed football from English Rugby," he said, "making it over to fit our requirements and temperament. It suits the spirit of America. Our boys and young men aren't the kind to enjoy cricket where they start playing today and make the first out three days later. They want action. They don't enjoy 10-mile runs because the dashes give them more action."

Then exhibiting a book on football fundamentals he wrote in 1904, he pointed out that it includes the same fundamentals employed in modern football, even the forward pass, which was not introduced until the following year. But the tempo, he added, has increased. The game is faster and consequently harder, which Yost believes is attributable to the fact that more boys are playing than in old days.

He will be 66 years young a week from today, and has been actively engaged in football as player and coach for almost half a century, but Yost is just as enthusiastic about it as the day he pulled on his first clumsy shoulder pads.

"There is no fun in football," he reasoned. "Not the kind of fun you get out of a vaudeville entertainment, but it gives you something that always will abide with you. I would have every boy love his school, and love every game he played in, regardless of what branch of sports he competes in."

The compliments heaped on the tall coach with the military bearing ranged from "grand person" to "most beloved character in Michigan," and they were sincere. Yost didn't say so, but he must have felt just a trifle angelic when they attempted to outdo one another.

Billy Myers Shoots 392 In 'C' Singles

Three bowlers smashed their way to first place in the Washington City Duckpin Association tournament at Lucky Strike last night when Melvin Wade, Government Printing Office topnotcher, shot a 385 in Class B singles while Billy Myers, Petworth League, sparkled in Class C with 392. Robert Shaw, Postoffice League, chalked up top set of 351 in Class D.

Mike Vitale, Electrical League roller, gained second place in Class A with 397, moving back of Bill Krauss, who holds the lead with 419. Joe Benner, another G. P. O. star, rode in to third place in Class A with a brilliant 395. Joe McGinness, Holy Name Society League roller, took second place in Class D, with 342. A 321 set gave H. Schmulovitz second place in Class E.

Documents copped team honors for the night, rolling 1,690 in Class B., while the Benmacks' 1,624 topped the efforts of two championship teams, S. Kann's, of the Department Store League, and Daily News, of the National Capital.

Eddie Mader Signs To Fight Champion

Eddie Mader, New York, who fights Bob Tow at Turner's Arena in the weekly boxing feature on Monday night, has been signed to meet John Henry Lewis in St. Louis on May 5, in a non-title bout.

At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Dear Al: Selections at Havre de Grace.

There seems to be no formula for the continued success of a racing stable. Unlimited money cannot keep the horses in winning form. Those with the necessary cash have gathered the best in horses, trainers and jockeys. They have their innings but their luck comes and goes and sooner or later their stables drift back in the standings. The big three of racing a decade ago win only occasional races now. Col. E. R. Bradley has had one winner this year. The Greentree and C. V. Whitney stables have done little in the past four years. Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable was the sensation of racing and then met all sorts of setbacks. Now the Vanderbilt Stable seems to be going the same way. The bettors have been flocking to the cerise and white this season and they have been taking what the boys refer to as a shellacking. Vanderbilt could do no wrong for two years. His horses dominated the stakes and came home regularly in the cheaper races. However, with the same unlimited facilities, the Vanderbilt horses are getting little these days. Of course the season is young, but followers of the stable will be broke soon. The Denemark horses have done nothing since Trainer Bert Michell was suspended. Big stables come and go, but none of them roll on forever. BILL.

First race—Happy Hazel turned in a fine effort last out and is tossed into action here with only 101 pounds. Looks like the spot for a winning effort. Addis Ababa and Saxopal have good figures and will be ready if the top one makes mistakes.

Second race—Cruising appears to be well placed in this event. Had poor racing luck last out. Patch Pocket should make a good showing. Likes this track. Prince Turley has lots of early speed and seems headed for a money position.

Third race—Smoke Signal is a promising juvenile and needs only to run back to those good recent races to take care of these. Hunting Home, a big fellow for his age, is dangerous. Singing Slave has a chance on Florida form.

Fourth race—Master Lad shapes up well in this field. He will have Harry Richards to do the booting and I'm going to string along. Wise Sister is running into condition and is a possibility. Patsey Begone and Sunned have some chance.

Fifth race—Xandra may come from behind and beat these. Most of the contenders are front runners and they may hustle each other into the ground. Gay Dog and Midshipman for the place and show.

Sixth race—Grainger may awake with a bang in this company. Will like a soft track. Daffy and Rollick to battle it out for the other awards. Boosel was a tip around the paddock.

Seventh race—Zinnia, one that has failed us before, has shown me enough to indicate that he might win a cheap race of this sort at a distance. Canpra and Koterito for the minor pay-offs.

Best bet—Master Lad.

Terps Smash W. & L.'s Nine By 30-3 Count

Maryland scored a baseball victory over Washington and Lee in football figures at College Park yesterday, the final count reading 30 to 3 for the Liners.

The Terps and Generals started out to play a baseball game at College Park yesterday but by the time the fifth inning had rolled around the tilt had taken on some aspects of a combination track meet and football game.

Maryland Frosh Trounce Eastern

Maryland's freshman baseball team opened its diamond season at College Park yesterday by scoring enough runs in the closing innings to subdue Eastern High School, 11 to 6.

Charlie Norton held the Easterners at bay for the Baby Terps, fanning 12 and allowing by 5 widely scattered hits. Norton also scored three of the yearling's runs.

POST NOTES ON Fishin'

BY BILL ACKERMAN

Pickups from here and there—flounders, the first spring fish for the angler, biting good at Peconic. Catches running up to 400 to the boat—weakfish reported caught on line, but proved to be false alarm—two small ones, however, were lifted in the nets—shows the season is on its way.

No doubt that predictions are bad business—on Tuesday several freely made that it would be two weeks before any hardheads would be taken in Chesapeake Bay nets—same day Frank Del Vecchio says he saw over 200 lifted at Point Lookout.

First boats to fish channel bass at Oregon Inlet started last Sunday—Tuesday, four of them showed good catches of the big spot-tails—just a flash as yet—wait a few more days. A few preseason fish and the catches in the pounds do not mean it is time to get started—just that the season is close by.

Fishermen at Sebago Lake, in the southern part of Maine, who have again this year found that streamer flies are a most attractive early season lure for landlocked salmon and trout, are anxiously awaiting opportunity to troll their flies in waters farther north.

Sebago, the second largest lake in Maine, opened to fishing April 1, but other noted salmon and trout waters, like the Rangeleys, Moosehead Lake and Square Lake, remain closed until free of ice. The prediction is that the first two will be clear around May 10.

Virtually all types of streamers have produced strikes at Sebago. Hardly a fisherman on the lake uses the time-honored live bait and spoons, although until a year or so ago they were standard equipment from the time the ice went out until fly fishing time in summer.

Tied to a 6-foot leader on an oiled line and a light salmon rod, the flys are trolled just beneath the surface. The fish hit hard and because of the light tackle fight longer.

In addition to Sebago, which did not entirely freeze over at any time during the winter, there are 11 other lakes and ponds open along the coast. Hastings, Ross, Little, Pemaquid, South, Forest, in Lincoln County. Walkers and Woods in Hancock and Wattuh and Duck lakes in Sagadahoc.

The number of Washington anglers that make the long trip each year for this fishing is surprising, but there is never any accounting for the other fellow's tastes. If they can stand climate that makes five and six blankets feel good at night, they deserve the glorious fishing.

A recent report from Stuart, Fla., notes the catch of a 16-pound 4-ounce spotted weakfish off St. Lucie Inlet by Mrs. J. B. Law, of West Palm Beach. If claimed, it will be a world record, for to the knowledge of this column there is no authentic rod and reel record on this fish. Fourteen pounds has been considered about tops. It won in that class in the Palm Beach tournament, and there is little doubt that it will win in the Field and Stream contest, in which it has also been entered.

Ward Edwards, the "Compleat Collecktor," tells in a recent article in Reading and Collecting, of the astonishment of a book dealer some years ago when he found that although Edwards already had three copies of Izaak Walton's "Compleat Angler," he had ordered two more from England. There is little doubt as to what he would think if he knew that now this collector's shelves contain 130 volumes of this book.

Edwards says: "I suppose a man who feels the need for more than one copy of a book is a little crazy, but I do have a great deal of fun in collecting 'Anglers.' I do not know what they have cost me and the price of none of them is recorded. I am trying to forget how much more than I could afford I paid for a few of them. My 'Anglers' are not for sale but when I am done with life I hope someone who will enjoy them as much as I have will come into possession of them. I collect the book because I love it; to me it is one of the most beautiful in the world. I have little patience with those cavaliers who tell us that Izaak Walton knew really little about catching fish. It was not his idea to stock a fish market. Angling was a secondary consideration. His theme was a decent, intelligent, happy life."

G. U. Is Host To Eastern Links Play

By a surprise vote of the league members, Georgetown University was again designated to entertain the golf teams in the Southern half of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf League on May 7 and 8 at Kenwood.

The Hoyas will play host to five teams, including Penn State, Pittsburgh, Cornell, Princeton and Pennsylvania. The same schools were entertained last year at Congressional and the Hilltoppers were not supposed to have another home date for three years.

The matches were originally scheduled at Pittsburgh with the same schools competing. The matches will open the league season with Cornell meeting Pennsylvania, Penn State vs. Princeton and Pittsburgh vs. Georgetown, all on Friday afternoon over the Bethesda course.

Landon Golfers Beat Georgetown Prep, 4-2

Landon Prep golfers took undisputed lead in the Prep School League yesterday, defeating Georgetown Prep School, 4 to 2, for their second victory. The match was played over the losers' course.

The individual matches in the first foursome were both halved. Dettweiler, of Georgetown, and Berkeley and Canning, of Prep, and Dunham finished all even, Landon winning the best ball, 3 and 1.

Channell, of Landon, scored the winners' only victory in the singles play by defeating Heinbaugh, 2 up, and Cummings scored the Little Hoyas' lone singles victory over Gawler, 7 and 6, but the visitors won the best ball and deciding point, 1 up.

Bill To Legalize Dog Racing Passed

Albany, N. Y., April 22 (AP).—New York's Legislature gave final approval today to a bill designed to legalize dog racing in the State.

The Democratic-controlled Senate followed action of the Assembly in approving the Hall bill by a party-split vote of 33 to 12.

It now goes to Gov. Lehman, who vetoed a similar measure last year because, he said, it failed to provide for proper regulation.

Blair Netmen Win.

10,000 Watch Wise Prince Take Havre de Grace Feature From Billy Bee

$39.20 Paid On Catomar And Tedema

Trainer J. P. Jones Has Both Winners; Merrily On Takes Third.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 22.—Wise Prince, coal black son of Wise Counselor, showed a liking for the heavy, holding track here today and won the Lansdowne Purse, a 6-furlong sprint serving feature purposes. Making his first start of the year, the 5-year-old had to be put to pressure by Jockey Harry Richards to hold a half-length advantage over the Bomar Stable's Billy Bee. Clingendaal, the lightweight of the field of six, was third a length farther back.

Racing in the black and gold of Felix Spatola, Wise Prince, winner of three straight races before being sent to winter quarters, was popular with the bettors and a mutuel of $6.90 was displayed. His time of 1:14 4-5 was good for the condition of the track.

The program, which started under a bright sun and was completed under a sagging sky, drew a crowd of 10,000.

The feature was a three-horse race from the start with those that finished in the money battling it out. Wise Prince had a slight lead in the first few yards but he was soon joined by Billy Bee on the outside and Clingendaal on the inside. The trio see-sawed along with first one and then the other in front by a narrow margin.

In the stretch, Richards went to work on Wise Prince and he began to draw clear only to have Billy Bee come again at the finish.

Those who wagered on Catomar started with a winner at a $17.70 mutuel. The daughter of Omar Khayyam lasted to win by a neck from Sun Mica which had two lengths the best of the favored Molasses Bob. The winner was clocked in 1:50 for the mile and 70 yards.

Tedema, a sprightly daughter of Teddy, made good at the first asking in the juvenile dash that was the second race. Running in accordance with her brisk trials, Tedema was well supported in the group of eight and paid a $6.20 mutuel. She led Heraldic to the wire by two and a half lengths. Third money went to Fancy That.

She brought a "double" to Trainer J. P. Jones, who also saddled Catomar in the first race. This combination produced a $39.20 payoff in the double.

MOLASSES BOB came up on the inside to enter contention along the backstretch, took command at the final bend, but tired gradually through the stretch. TORQUIL went forwardly, but could not menace. SWIFT FLASH raced wide throughout. KALEIDA had early speed while setting the pace and stopped badly.

MERRILY ON, at home in the going, went to the front without effort in the opening 70 yards, drew far out and was under a strong grip for the final quarter. TONEY BOY raced on the inside all the way and showed a good effort. EL BANDIDO, first away, tired gradually in the stretch after being closest to the pacemaker. DONA DULCIN broke in a tangle and went evenly thereafter. BRAVO CARUSO was rushed to the leaders along the backstretch and tired badly. The others were outrun.

WANDREL lacked early speed, was allowed to settle into stride, saved ground entering the stretch and rallied to a drive to be kept to pressure to the end. PEPPERY, sluggish at the beginning, found racing room on the inside approaching the stretch to gain sharply, swung out to the middle of the stretch and closed with a belated rush. HAPPY HOSTESS took command going to the far turn under hustling tactics and tired gradually in the final sixteenth. HARD CHASE raced forwardly for a half and tired. The latter was rushed up on the outside approaching the far turn, took command briefly, came slightly wide into the stretch and came again at the end. CLINDENDAAL broke poorly, was rushed up on the inside to get to the front, saved much ground entering the stretch and tired in the closing stages. WAR EMBLEM raced wide.

MISS TAD, closest to the pace of ITSIE BITSIE and steadied along to the stretch, came with a rush in the final sixteenth and was up in the last strides. ITSIE BITSIE opened a good lead going to the backstretch, drew far out and tired suddenly in the closing 50 yards. THE MAULER, far back for a half, came to the outside to better his position at the final bend and closed with a belated rush and was going fastest at the end. SALLANDRY closed willingly. RELATIVITY broke down in the running. SUMAC was close up for three-quarters and stopped. CHILLY EBBIE had early speed.

LETTER BOX, steadied along within striking distance of the pacemakers, came around METTLE to take command nearing the quarter pole and was kept to a drive to hold ABBOT'S LAST safe. The latter was forwardly placed throughout and closed with good courage. INFILEE, far back as usual in the early running, came to outside swinging for the stretch and closed full of run. DEARZIN went evenly. METTLE stopped after racing RUNNING WATER into submission.

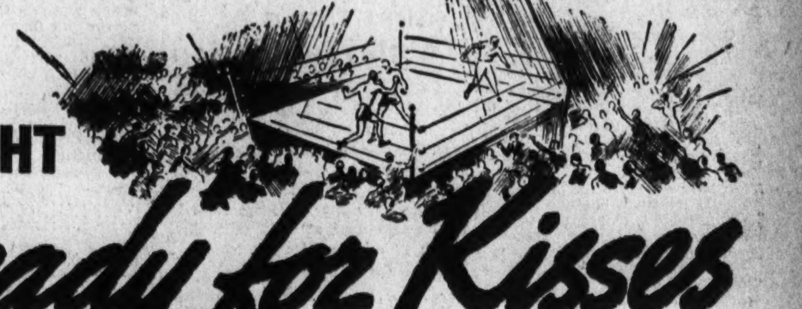
30 MINUTES AFTER THE FIGHT



You're ready for Kisses

THE METALLIC NOSE KNOWS

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

—if you've smoked a Vintage White Owl

Smokers' test shows that White Owls are at least 25% easier on your breath

THE FIGHT'S OVER—but be sure it doesn't start again at home. Women have a right to complain about stale tobacco breath. Smoke the cigar that is easier on your breath. Then you can expect a real welcome home.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

Steel Industry Sets New Peak For Production

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 22.—Steel ingot output has hit a new peak of 92 per cent of the country's capacity, or an estimated total for this week of 1,204,979 gross tons, which is slightly above the record of 1,193,284 tons per week in May, 1929, Iron Age said today in its weekly review of the industry.

"Heavy shipments of finished steel are creating an easier situation for the steel user," the trade journal said, "causing a relaxing of some of the intense pressure on mills for deliveries that was prevalent a month or so ago.

Orders Under Year Ago.

"While orders with individual steel companies are running from 10 to 30 per cent behind those of the like period in March, this is not a serious falling off, considering that March sales were the heaviest of the post-depression period. Moreover, new sales are not far below shipments in volume and would be much heavier if mills were willing to accept all of the third quarter business that is offered. So far, most mills are restricting third quarter reservations to sheets and strip.

"Building projects of the smaller type are fairly numerous, but reports from contractors and architects indicate that a good many construction jobs of large size have been postponed or abandoned owing to higher material and labor costs, notwithstanding the fact that fabricated structural steel quotations have not yet reflected the recent $4 a ton advance of plain material."

Brokers' Loans Rise $8,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $8,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,036,000,000.

Wheat Tumbles After Slump At Winnipeg

Maximum Chicago Drop Is 2¼ Cents Per Bushel.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 22.—Severe tumbles of wheat values at Winnipeg, 4 cents a bushel in some cases, unsettled the Chicago market late today, with 2¼ cents losses here. Heavy liquidating sales of May wheat tended almost from the outset to drag Chicago prices down, but the offerings were well absorbed until the Canadian market gave way in earnest as the day approached an end. Houses with Eastern connections that were prominent buyers earlier in the week appeared to be principal sellers today.

At the close, wheat futures in Chicago were ⅞ to 2¼ cents under yesterday's finish, May, 1.32½@1.32¾; July, 1.18½; September, 1.16@1.16¼; corn, ½ to 1¼ down; May, 1.27⅜@1.27⅝; July, 1.16⅛@1.16¼; September, 1.08@1.08⅛; oats, ⅜ to ⅞ off; May, 48⅞@49, and rye showing ¼ to 1¼ setback; May, 1.10½. Provisions closed 5 to 17 cents higher.

The profit was equal to $1.26 a share of common stock compared with 59 cents in the first 1936 quarter and with $1.02 in the quarter ended December 31. During the first nine months of the fiscal year which will end June 30, the company reported consolidated net earnings of $21,558,256.

Stocks Sell Lower in Moderate Trading; Bonds, Wheat, Cotton Decline.

New York, April 22.—Stocks sold off for the first time without any material change in the volume of trading. Losses of 1 to 2 points were well scattered over the list. To this accompaniment Treasury bonds carried out another downward movement which did not find resistance until losses of as much as a half point had been sustained. Wheat dipped nearly 2 cents a bushel and cotton was sharply lower. Sterling exchange continued upward.

Rubber stocks were about the only group to make uniform gains with Goodyear, Goodrich and Lee setting the pace. Agricultural implement issues, some of which had advanced as much as 20 points during the previous two weeks were under pressure. Deere dipped more than four points. Case was unable to hold an early gain of over two points and later sold well under the previous closing.

Elsewhere fractional declines were recorded. Steels suffered minors losses, United States Steel reacting from a forenoon high of 116⅜ to below 115 in the late trading.

With one or two exceptions utilities did not range far above or below yesterday's closing. Brooklyn Union Gas broke half a dozen points on the dividend reduction, which was not altogether surprising in utility circles. Consolidated Edison softened a point or so. American Telephone held a slight gain during the greater part of the day.

Exceptions to the downward trend included Motor Products, Westinghouse Air Brake, American Agricultural Chemical, Continental Steel and American Chain & Cable.

While for the moment the stock market is cheered by the considerable increases in first quarter earnings now being reported and by other trade statistics showing that the fast pace of business activity is being well maintained, the uncertainties of Government action lie in the fore background. Markets are bound to be swayed from time to time by considerations of a reduction or an increase in Government spending for relief and general purposes of stimulation, depending on budget balancing and taxation, and by monetary measures or proposals suggested by what is now recognized as the administration's fear lest inflation overtake it with a bad boom too soon before the next election.

Taxation.

A great deal of talk will be heard. The monetary and industrial control troops will be ordered in this direction and that, only to be recalled and started off anew, but what the ultimate objective will be or the chances of attaining it will continue to be merely guesswork. Higher and much higher taxation is a dead certainty, but it is idle to predict when it will begin in earnest, and whether it will come before or after an inflationary bust. Those who act as interpreters to the President, to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Federal Reserve Board Governor insist that now the New Deal policy is clear—namely, that lasting prosperity without either booms or depressions will be given the country.

That, it may as well be admitted, always has been the heartfelt wish of every administration beginning with that of George Washington, but it is not unlikely that the country will see another boom or two and possibly another depression or two as well. Meanwhile our position looks strong beside those of other nations. France has an even worse financial problem and a much worse political situation than have we. Great Britain also is running the risk of inflation and is carrying much heavier taxation as well. The position of Germany is precarious from every point of view.

Land o' Phlegm.

British commentators sometimes have accused Americans of an overdeveloped speculative instinct. Our stock market spree in 1928-29 was held up to horror even more in London than it since has been among a certain class of writers on economic subjects and politicians in this country. Here are a few headlines taken from a recent issue of the conservative Financial News, of London.

Third Day of Market Chaos.
Gold Panic Averted.
Wild Movements in Commodities.
Wild Day for Rubber.
Frantic Kaffir Rally After Violent Slump.
Big Falls in Jo'burg.

It apparently was all caused by the Americans (assisted by the French), for the News explains it: "Market chaos caused by the United States gold price scare persisted yesterday, aggravated by fresh fears for the franc, by heavy Paris selling, and by a fresh slump in gold in London. Kaffirs, oils, rubbers and internationals all slumped violently in the early dealings. In the late afternoon, however, President Roosevelt reaffirmed categorically that there is no plan to lower the United States gold prices. This precipitated a spectacular change in market sentiment. Amid wild dealings all speculative departments staged a frantic recovery." That, it may be observed, is a rare example of the well-known British flair for understatement.

Insurance.

Withdrawal of its deposit insurance cover from the North Bergen Trust Company by FDIC brings up the matter of banking independence. While removal of the insurance privilege, after a few years of its application, might cut down bank deposits, it does not follow that a bank cannot obtain business without the aid of deposit insurance if it takes the initiative. Quite possibly the FDIC could put a bank in a questionable position purely for political reasons, but when the bank itself decides to go without or to give up deposit insurance, the case is different. It may be recalled that the Hartford-Connecticut Trust Company withdrew from the FDIC more than a year ago, but it has done well just the same. The bank's deposits in September, 1935, when news of withdrawal was announced, were $33,900,000. At the end of December, 1936, deposits had risen to $41,453,000.

British Investors.

The following from the London Economist is a fair sample of what British investors are now being told with regard to American securities. "It does not seem unreasonable to suppose that the Government will be restricted to verbal attacks designed to create the right mental atmosphere; this is a time-honored method in America. For an indefinite period it may doubtless be successful; but it is unlikely that the business boom can for long be completely ignored by Wall Street. Yet the effects of rising costs, labor disputes, and the approach of some industries to the limits of physical capacity, suggest that the time has come for discrimination among Wall Street's favorites."

Inactive U. S. Gold Passes Half Billion

The Treasury's inactive gold account passed $500,000,000 on April 20, increasing $13,937,395.54 over the previous day to $505,500,631.01. Gold acquired under the Administration's steriliaztion program is placed in the inactive account. The program is designed to offfset effects of gold inflows on domestic credit.

Prestige Held Sales Factor In Insurance

E. C. Andersen Talks to Life Underwriters on Power Selling.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Power and prestige are definite factors in selling insurance, members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters' Association were told yesterday by Edward C. Andersen, educational director, Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Hartford. Speaking on "Power Selling," at the monthly luncheon meeting of the association, at the Willard Hotel, he said it was a situation in which the salesman first must be able to interview the prospect under favorable conditions, and then place himself on a plane higher than the average agent who calls on that prospect. "To do this," he said, "First, secure a 'power lead' to the prospect and when you go to see him have some prestige behind you. We have found that hard work is not sufficient. Our conclusion is that a fewer number of effective interviews under 'power conditions' will produce the largest percentage of volume."

Nominated for the association's board of directors were: John E. O'Brien, Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Richard W. Griswold, Guardian Life Insurance Co.; Graham E. Wilson, Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Garland M. Terry, Equitable Life Assurance Co. of New York; James A. DeForce, Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., H. Gordon Edmonds, State Mutual Life Insurance Co. Three of these are to be elected at the May meeting.

Round Table Conference.

Members of the association have been invited to attend an insurance round table conference, held in conjunction with the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, on April 27. The conference will begin with a luncheon at 1 p. m., at the Mayflower Hotel.

Three prominent speakers will lead the discussion at this session. They are O. J. Arnold, president of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., Minneapolis, who will discuss "Investment Policies of Life Insurance Companies;" John C. Blackall, insurance commissioner of Connecticut, will speak on "Increasing Uniformity in State Supervision and Regulation of Insurance." In addition, P. D. Betterley, a business man who has made a special study of insurance subjects, will discuss "Recent Developments in Workmen's Compensation Legislation and Their Practical Effects."

The program reveals many other prominent speakers listed for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization. Among them will be Ellsworth C. Alvord, who will discuss "The Tax and its Background," and Dr. Wilson Compton, secretary-manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, whose topic is, "How Successful Has Our Tariff Bargaining Been?"

Senator Royal S. Copeland is scheduled to speak on "What Is Needed for Food Control?" Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, will discuss "An International Viewpoint on American Problems." At the general session Wednesday morning, April 28, Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady will address the convention on "Labor Relations in Industry."

Roy M. Green, financial expert, United States Department of Agriculture, will speak on "Crop Insurance," at a luncheon conference. Dr. L. C. Gray, also of that department, will review "Farm Tenancy," and H. R. Tolley, "Crop Control." President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank and immediate past president of the American Bankers Association, will preside at a round table conference on "Inflation Dangers," and Mark Sullivan, writer, will review the last 25 years. President Harper Sibley will preside at the four-day session.

Federal Reserve Sells U. S. Bonds

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that it had switched from a buying to a selling position in the Government bond market during the week ended April 21.

After heavy earlier bond acquisitions in connection with its open-market operations, the board said it disposed of $1,000,000 of these obligations, during the week, bringing holdings to $688,621,000. The operations were launched early this month to steady a fluctuating market in Government securities.

Holdings of Tresaury notes dropped $16,000,000 to $1,174,430,000, but $17,000,000 of Treasury bills were acquired, lifting this account to $623,619,000.

The board said member bank excess reserves, which provide the basis for credit expansion, declined $40,000,000 during the week, to $1,590,000,000. On May 1 the board will increase deposit reserve requirements 16 2-3 per cent, and this is expected to eliminate about $700,000,000 of the present excess reserves.

Court Opens TorchSlaying Case Monday

2 Other Murder Trials Set Same Day in Chambersburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., April 22.—Commonwealth and defense attorneys today put the finishing touches on preparations for the trials of three persons charged with murder, whose cases will be called at the regular session of court opening here Monday.

District Attorney J. Glenn Benedict, of Franklin County, announced today that the case of Ralph Hawk, of Marion, who has been indicted on two charges of murder, a charge of arson and another of aggravated assault and battery, will be called first.

Hawk is charged with burning to death Mrs. Hazel Gelwix, widow, and her daughter, Helen, 16, mother and sister of his erstwhile sweetheart, Katherine Gelwix, in fire that destroyed the Gelwix home in Marion on January 1. The assault charge is based on an alleged attack on Katherine Gelwix with a flashlight. He is alleged to have struck her before pouring kerosene on the bed in which Mrs. Gelwix and Helen were sleeping and setting fire to the bedclothes. Katherine was rescued by New Year celebrators.

Witnesses also are being subpenaed for the case of Glenn Sleighter, trucker, of near Williamson, and his wife, Elva, who are accused of murder in the death of Jean Seville, 8, children's aid society ward, who made her home with the Sleighters. The Commonwealth charges the Seville child was fatally beaten in the Sleighter home and her body secreted on a Bedford County mountain side.

The course in the case of Oscar Shriver, Chambersburg, who is charged with strangling to death his 8-year-old nephew, Floyd Shriver, jr., depends on the findings of a sanity commission.

21 New Forest Fires Reported In Maryland

State Bureau Declares Rains Lesseen Danger Rest of Week.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 22.—The reports of 21 new forest fires to the State forestry department today brought the total for this week to 83 in Maryland. Heavy rains of yesterday lessened the danger of new outbreaks during the remainder of the week.

The principal fires reported today were North Appleton, Cecil County, 70 acres; White Hall, Baltimore County, 25 acres; Slate Ridge, Harford County, 25; Swanton, Garrett County, 40 acres; Patuxent City, Charles County, 30 acres; North Lakesville, Dorchester County, 100 acres; Finchville, Dorchester County, 50 acres.

W. J. Quick, assistant State forester in charge of fire prevention, announced today that most of the railroads in Maryland had completed work on clearing away inflammable material along their rights-of-way in fire-hazard sections.

Quick said the only sections where the precautions had not been taken were in Allegany and Garrett Counties and along the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks in Frederick and Washington Counties.

He explained the law requires the railroad companies to clear back 100 feet from the rails through timberland designated by the State forestry department as fire hazards. The penalty for failing to do this before March 15 is $5 a day for each mile.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 22.—Increased public buying entered the stock market today and prices closed generally higher. Gilt-edged securities, mining shares, oils and industrials were in good demand, with steel, shipping and rubber issues leading the advance. German bonds and transatlantics held steady, while tobacco and distilling stocks were mixed.

Paris—Government bonds closed higher, rentes being quoted unchanged to 80 centimes up. Suez Canal gained 395 francs and Bank of France advanced 85 francs. Royal Dutch reacted 10 francs from yesterday.

Liverpool—Grain prices closed irregular, with wheat futures ⅜d to ⅝d down. Active covering developed in May contracts and Spain made further purchases of Argentine wheat. Cotton futures closed 3 to 9 points higher on trade calling and local covering. There was a partial decline caused by hedging and London liquidation, which was influenced by the easiness of the dollar.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Movement of funds continued mostly against the dollar in foreign exchange dealings yesterday and the French fran rallied from a preceding decline to move a little higher with other currencies.

The franc touched 4.44 cents, up .00¼ of a cent, after falling earlier in the week to the lowest quotations since devaluation last September.

The British pound held near its recent peak of $4.94 up ½ of a cent. Swiss, German and Belgian currencies also moved up a little. Holland guilders were unchanged at 54.76 cents.

In London the dollar closed at $4.93¾ to the pound against the overnight New York sterling rate of $4.93½. The dollar finished in Paris at the equivalent of 4.446 cents to the franc, compared with the New York overnight rate of 4.437.

2 Women Die As Auto, Truck Crash Head-On

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., April 22.—One woman was killed instantly and another fatally injured near here today when their car, traveling at a terrific rate of speed, crashed head-on into a 5-ton truck at "Cemetery Curue," scene of 12 motor fatalities.

So great was the impact that it drove the steering wheel post through the body of one woman, identified as Mrs. Victor M. Mann, of Atlanta. She was decapitated and had one leg and both arms broken.

The other woman, Emma Sceifer, died in Harrisonburg Hospital a few hours after she had been removed from the tangled wreckage of the car, which was demolished. She never regained consciousness.

Both women were said to have been wanted by the Staunton police for larceny. According to reports, they fled Staunton at 5:30 a. m., an hour before the fatal crash.

Frank Kelly, driver of the truck, said that the women's car was going at "an unbelievable" rate of speed. He was released under bond to appear at a hearing set for May 3. His truck was badly damaged.

The women's car was so completely wrecked that Shenandoah County police officers worked for hours before they could establish indentification. Handbags found in the wreckage finally led to a check-up with Atlanta police.

Mrs. F. S. Lewis, of Montgomery, identified Mrs. Mann as her sister. Victor Mann, of New York, identified both victims.

'Blanketing' Asked For Revenue Aides

A bill to place all employes of district offices of collectors of internal revenue, including the collectors themselves, under civil service was introduced yesterday in the House of Representatives by Representative Flannery (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

Incumbents would be blanketed into the civil service after six months' probation by certification of their superiors that their work is "satisfactory."

The Senate Civil Service Committee will meet this morning in executive session to consider bills on their calendar.

Russian Envoy Defends Trials Of 'Trotskyites' to Press Club

Troyanovsky Denounces American Commission Investigating Activities, Stresses Soviet's Peaceful Intentions.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Defending as justified the recent treason trials in Moscow, Soviet Ambassador Alexander A. Troyanovsky in an address before the National Press Club yesterday sharply denounced the unofficial commission of American liberals investigating the activities of Leon Trotsky, anti-Stalinite.

The Soviet envoy declared the work of the commission, now sitting in Mexico, so far had been "a flop" and that the commission was "prejudiced in favor of Trotsky and had only one aim: to rehabilitate him." Commenting on the withdrawal of Carleton Beals from the commission, Troyanovsky asserted that "the atmosphere of adoration of Trotsky was unbearable for him."

Troyanovsky, contending the Soviet Union was firmly attached to the fundamental principles of democrary, asserted "we want to persuade all doubting Thomases that we are for world peace and that all our armaments are destined for maintaining peace." Ignoring the Soviet Union as "one of the pillars of world peace" leads to "a false conclusion about the way to preserve international peace," he declared.

Second Speech of Kind.

The Troyanovsky address marked the second time within the last week the ambassador of a major European power stationed here has sen fit to make a staunch defense of his government before the Washington newspaper corps.

Dr. Hans Luther, retiring German Ambassador, Saturday night interrupted a bock beer party at his embassy for newspapermen and American officials to make a spirited defense of the Hitler regime and to assert that Germany was united behind the Nazi leader. Dr. Luther yesterday made his farewell call on President Roosevelt.

In each instance the foreign envoys made it clear they were anxious to have the views they presented laid before the American people.

The Soviet Ambassador, speaking of the recent trials in Moscow of alleged Trotsky conspirators against the Stalin regime, pointed out that the trials had been open; that they had been attended by many people and that they had "devoted many days to scrupulous investigation of the secret conspiracy after long preliminary inquiry of all the convicted persons."

Criticizes Commission.

"Only a biased commission, he asserted, "could hope to make an investigation in a few days in Mexico of a conspiracy in the Soviet Union, hearing only one man, Mr. Trotsky.

"Of course, Trotsky did not say anything new. The commission for the defense of Trotsky did not want and could not touch one essential point, namely, the conspiratorial work of Mr. Trotsky in the Soviet Union in connection with his preaching of revolution against the Soviet government."

He cited several utterances of Trotsky, designed to show the former Bolshevist chieftain had urged counter-revolution and the assassination of Stalin. He also gave quotations to show Lenin was distrustful of Trotsky.

"The conspiracy against the Soviet government was clearly proved and the sentence passed is justified beyond any reasonable doubt," the Soviet envoy declared.

Contending the Soviet Union is the type of democracy of which Abraham Lincoln spoke when he referred to "a government of the people, by the people and for the people," Troyanovsky said the new Soviet constitution provided his county with "formal democracy, universal, direct suffrage and the secret ballot to elect local, provincial and central authorities."

"But the skeptics still point to a dictatorship, which, to a certain extent, exists in our country, as if to prove that we have no democracy; and even compare our country and Fascist countries, judging superficially on the basis of dictatorship in our country and in Fascist countries," Troyanovsky asserted.

Regard Selves "Entrenched."

"But being surrounded by enemis outside and having hostile elements within our country, as for instance Trotskyites, we have to defend our democracy and regard ourselves as entrenched in a military camp. In Fascist countries the Fuehrer is the emanation of all wisdom and is considered as something divine, the people having only to obey his orders.

"In our country the spirit, the tendency and the practice are different. The people are the foundation of our socialistic system and the leaders represent public opinion; the dictatorial methods are regarded as a necessary means for defense and will disappear when external and internal enemies plotting against our country also will disappear.

"Every democratic country, in case of an emergency, is obliged to establish some kind of dictatorship to save democracy. Dictatorship for democracy, for democratic institutions is different from dictatorship against democracy, against democratic institutions, against democratic aspirations of the people. When the time comes for the struggle between imperfect democracy and perfect fascism, we are ready to throw all our influence on the side of democracy."

Zioncheck Widow Named in Suit for Broken Furniture

Alleging that the late Marion A. Zioncheck, member of the House of Representatives from Washington, had damaged the furniture in the furnished apartment she subleased to him, Mrs. Pamela S. Young yesterday in District Court filed suit against his estate for $2,759.55.

Mrs. Young said she had a well-furnished apartment in Harvard Hall which she sublet to the Representative. When she returned she found there had been much damage wrought and that the lawmaker had been responsible for it.

She filed the suit against Mrs. Rubye Nix Zioncheck, the widow. Zioncheck was killed in a fall from a hotel window in Washington State.

Mrs. Young asserted Zioncheck had agreed to care for her furniture through his tenure. She claimed a manuscript case and a dining room suite were the chief items damaged.

Park-o-Meters For D. C. Urged ToAid Revenue

House Group Estimates $500,000 to $2,000,000 Would Be Raised.

a year. While other cities receive about 40 cents an hour on an average, he said, the District could not expect more than 30 or 35 cents because of the prohibition on parking during morning and afternoon rush periods.

Nichols previously had suggested an estimate of $800,000, while Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, guessed wildly at $2,000,000 before Van Duzer had testified.

Dirksen, who started the discussion, pointed out that manufacturing companies install the parking machines without cost and that collections pay for them within six months.

The park-o-meter serves a dual purpose, Nichols declared, in that it prevents over-time parking and simplifies enforcement of parking regulations while at the same time providing revenue for the use of the streets.

Van Duzer stated that other cities had found that only a third as many traffic policemen are needed to enforce regulations after park-o-meters are installed.

Earlier in the hearing Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan urged the sub-committee to give some thought to future traffic and highway needs in the Dsitrict.

Washington is lagging behind in looking to the future by the construction of high-speed highways such as are being built in other cities'" he said.

Questioned regarding his opinions on subways Col. Sultan said that he could not make up his mind until an engineering survey is made as to costs.

He suggested, however, that as a beginning the District might well build underpasses beneath such traffic hazards as Dupont Circle and subsequently connect these with any subway development.

After questioning members of the Public Utilities Commission, the sub-committee adjourned until 10 a. m. Tuesday, when it will receive a preliminary set of tax recommendations from the District Commissioners and will delve into insurance levies.

Capt. H. C. Whitehirst, director of highways, surprised the sub-committee somewhat by indorsing indirectly the efforts of Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, to place the case of Trees and Parking Division and the Department of Vehicles and Traffic on the gasoline tax.

Questioned by Nichols, who had the rider shifting the Department of Vehicles and Traffic to the fund stricken from the District supply bill on a point of order, Capt. Whitehurst said he believed all highway and traffic costs should be borne out of funds collected from motorists, either by gasoline levies or motor vehicle taxes.

Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, acting chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, in answer to questions, stated she would oppose any increase in taxes on liquor or lignt wines and beer but thinks that license fees might well be increased. The fee for hotels with 100 rooms or more, she said, ought to be $2,000 a year.

Riley Elgen, chairman of the commission, submitted a table to show that the utilities now pay a total of $2,052,779.70 in local taxes.

Sen. Byrnes Offers Dual Plan To Balance Budget for 1938

Proposes States Carry Half of WPA Burden; Wants Horizontal Cut of 10% on Departmental Grants; Can Save $500,000,000.

measures—Agriculture, Interior and War. He may propose it as an amendment to the relief bill, or he may offer a joint resolution.

Fixed charges, such as interest, that the Government is obligated to pay, would be eliminated from the Byrnes 10 per cent cut. Further provision would be made for the President to transfer funds from one bureau or department to another. Byrnes said this would enable the President to avoid impairment of the efficiency of any agency that required more funds to operate. Similar provision for transfer of funds has been made previously only in relief appropriations.

Exempts Poor States.

The South Carolina Senator's first attack on the economy dilemma will come in his relief bill amendment to cut the $1,500,000,000 proposed by the President to $1,000,000,000. At the heart of this amendment is a requirement that States financially able to match Federal relief funds, dollar for dollar, must do so.

If the $1,000,000,000 relief amendment is approved, no State or political sub-division could obtain 100-per cent Federally-financed WPA projects unless they certified to the Government that they are unable to raise the money to pay at least part of the cost. If their credit position showed they could pay up to 50 per cent, they would be held to that amount, and the Government would pay the balance.

If this is done, Byrnes believes $1,000,000,000 would be more than sufficient to carry the Federal relief burden. In addition, he believes it would bring home to local taxpayers the cost of relief, and only aid actually needed would be sought. Not only would it make communities conscious of the expense, he believes, but it would tend to eliminate all but the needy from local relief rolls.

Byrnes pointed out that millions in Federal social security funds for relief of the unemployed and the helpless are now moving into the States, further easing the local burden. If the cuts made this session were too severe, he pointed out that deficiency appropriations could remedy inequalities when Congress convenes next year.

While not committing himself to any fixed figure for relief, Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the Senate deficiency appropriation sub-committee, said he thought the security wage basis of relief was wrong, and it should be apportioned hereafter on a basis of actual need.

Joining the retrenchment front, Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New Yorkk, pioneer advocate of Federal relief appropriations, said yesterday he was "for economy," but was not committed to any fixed figure.

Wants Cut Justified.

"If $500,000,000, or if $1,500,000,000 is justified by the facts, I am for it," said Wagner. "It is a factual question. But I think no one should be permitted to starve or to go without shelter.

"There is some talk of making the States carry the relief burden. I am for that, so far as the States are able to do it. But it must be remembered that the Federal Government has invaded virtually every field of revenue left open to the States."

Representative Taber, spearhead of the House Republican move toward flat percentage cuts in appropriations, told the House yesterday that he "arose to support the President of the United States."

Recommending agriculture appropriations on the same level as last year, Taber said this could be done without harm to the farmers.

"The farmer would be the first to suffer from the collapse that would follow if the budget is not balanced," Taber said.

Defending the agriculture bill, Representative Clarence Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, said much of the money provided was not "primarily for agriculture." Some of the major appropriations are for such items as highways and forestry, he pointed out.

Early yesterday the House without a record vote and with little discussion passed a $1,660,000 bill providing deficiency funds for the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Railroad Retirement Board and the Commerce and Treasury departments.

But when the Agriculture Department bill was up later, a $24,940 amendment by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, providing more adequate Weather Bureau flood reporting facilities in the Ohio River Valley, was defeated by a 9 to 21 vote, after half an hour of debate.
